Four schools dominate FFA Week contests

dals. As is true with the sports event, a few ennial powerhouses ran
y with more than an rage share of medals.
hree Lancaster County
ools and one from York
nty split 33 "gold"
dals between them.
hrata and Solanco each nine gold medals, New land had eight, and Red came home with seven.
hrata earned its "gold"
dals in dairy foods, land ging, meat judging and dairy cattle judging. Solanco excelled in ag sales, dairy foods, farm management, interviewing, land judging and dairy cattle judging. For New Holland, the top events were agronomy, dairy foods, land judging, poultry judging and public speaking. A list of all winners from southeastern-southcentral Pennsylvania is included in this report.

The annual competition is held here each Summer on the Penn State campus and is sponsored jointly by the Department of Agricultural Education in the College of Agriculture and the Pennsylvania Department of Education, Harrisburg. In all 22 FFA contests were Candy Barker, Pennsylvania FFA Princess for 1977-78, wishes all fathers a happy Father's Day.

Candy Barker is new FFA Princess

By DIETER KRIEG

UNIVERSITY PARK - The Pennsylvania FFA has a real farm girl representing it as Princess for 1977-78. She is 16-year old Candy Barker from Northern Potter High School. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Barker, Ulysses, she makes her home on her parents' 250 acre farm.

"I love dairy farming - that's where my heart and soul belong," she said in a convincing interview with Lancaster Farming at the Penn State campus. She is "herdsgirl" at home and milks 48 registered Holsteins morning and evening. Eighteen of the black-and-whites are owned by her. After graduation next Spring, she wants to go into partnership with her father and continue in the profession she has loved ever since she was old enough to walk.

The blue-eyed and blonde-haired princess begins her days at 5:30 a.m., does the milking, prepares for school, and then returns to work at the farm. Her mother, Bonnie Jean, and three younger sisters - Carmie, Cookie, and Georgie - help with the barn work, while Mr. Barker is occupied with his 175 tillable acres. Her responsibilities other than milking include keeping the breeding and registry records up to date and artificial insemination. She learned the latter technique a year and half ago and has been providing that service

First combined barley exceeds expectations

ORK, Pa. – In spite of a

It s some of the nicest

k Only a few loads had

nkle admitted. "Barley

ccording to the mill er, the wheat harvest already begun in Texas, but prices are well under the two dollar per bushel mark. And while the York market for corn was at $2.40 this past Tuesday, pessimistic predictions are that it, too, could drop to under two dollars by fall harvest.

Tuesday's barley price at Sprenkle's West York mill was $1.90 per bushel, a dime higher than outlying mills in the county were paying.

The first grain coming off is of the bearded, Barsoy variety. Moisture readings were in the twelve to thirteen per cent range, with bushel weights running at about 47 pounds. Cloudy weather with scattered showers was slowing the cutting efforts

Unanimous vote passes farm protection bill

HARRISBURG - The Pennsylvania House passed HB 111 on Monday and according to Rep. Noah Wenger of Lancaster County, "the future of farmland in Pennsylvania will be more secure because of it." The bill was unanimously approved 192 to 0. That should give the bill a real good chance of gaining quick passage in the Senate, Wenger told Lancaster Farming earlier this week.

Wenger, a sponsor of the legislation and a member of the House Agriculture Committee, said the measure would restrict the right of government agencies to condemn prime agricultural lands for uses other than farming.

He said the bill also would establish a committee to make determinations and recommendations on such proposed condemnations.

"With farmland diminishing at an alarming rate in the Commonwealth, the need for this legislation is clear," Wenger said.

"Indeed, in Lancaster County recently we had a case in which a township authority wanted to condemn a productive farm in order to expand a sanitary landfill. That farm was saved from acquisition through the personal intervention of myself, other members of the House Agriculture Committee and

Ag graduates speak on problems, future

NKING SPRING - The

something has to be with land use
agement.
Art Noss of Conrad

e way farmers can fully fight the land pinch is through plant breeding, he suggested. Yields per acre will have to continue to rise, and better disease resistance may be part of that answer, Noss explained.

Norman Manbeck, also graduating from Conrad Weiser, feels little farms won't be able to survive in the future. "They just won't be able to compete," he said. The trend will be towards corporations and larger family farms involving more partnerships. "Also, farmers have to continually increase their yields per acre as the population continues to rise and more and more land is consumed for non-agricultural

Poultry conference set for this coming week

LANCASTER - The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation reports that advance registrations for the 1977 Pennsylvania Poultry Conference and annual banquet on June 23, 1977, at the Host farm here, are far exceeding last year's count. The Federation attributes this to its new format - three separate conferences (broiler, egg, turkey) as well as a hatchery seminar in the morning and the engagement of speakers on controversial subjects.

The egg industry will be provided with an opportunity to hear about a new approach in forced molting which includes some data not yet released for publication and a hard look at what the current expansion in the industry will bring in the future. Other topics include a look at some new ideas in egg marketing and a new update on nutrition.

The broiler industry will be provided with some new information on processing and proper environment and ventilation with housing. The turkey industry will learn how a local retail market is built and the cost-benefit ratio of controlled environment in housing. Both the broiler and turkey groups will hear a discussion about their future, the water quality effect on growth and what the future availability of propane will be.

In addition to the three

No type of coastal area contains more wildlife than a marsh. Marine biologists estimate that one acre of marsh mud may contain as many as 82,000 individuals of a single species of worm, along with billions of bacteria. What they consume fertilizes the mud and gives the marsh its great vitality.

Not only do spiders spin their own webs, they also eat them when they're no longer needed. Web strands are made of pure protein, which the spider can recycle; when a line is no longer needed, the spider makes a meal of it.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

JUNE 20-26, 1977

Summer begins this week.

Patch leaky roofs now ... Long-playing record demonstrated June 21, 1948 ... First quarter of the moon June 24 ... Average length of days for the week, 15 hours, 19 minutes (Longest days of the year this week) . . Summer begins Tuesday June 21 ... Fifteen per cent of all U.S. tornadoes come this month ... Communists invade South Korea June 25, 1950 .. He who neglects to weed will surely come to need

Ask the Old Farmer: Why is it that people from Massachusetts call a water fountain a "bubbler," soda pop "tonic," and a milkshake a "frappe"? S T, NYC.

Massachusetts is responsible for many firsts, and one of them was making over the English language so nobody can understand it.

Home Hints: Avoid using scissors to slant-cut the stem of a flower as this will crush it Always use a very sharp knife

Greater New York - New Jersey: Sunny through Wednesday, then heavy rain and cool by midweek; Saturday brings clearing & hot, with some rain by Sunday.

After 1200 milkings even the best inflation starts costing you money.

Unfortunately, long before most dairymen can spot wear, worn inflations have already cost them money in time, teat damage or lost production.

That's why it's important to choose the best inflation for your type of milker, and it's easily important to replace inflations on a precise schedule.

MY FATHER

By DIETER KRIEG

There have been times when I wished my father were not the stubborn and dominating individual he is. We haven't always agreed on everything, and until just a few years ago, that always meant bending his way or else.

My father's strong will, however, is one of his most admirable and respectable qualities.

One Summer day in 1952, for example, I saw a truck pull up to our farm. Once parked, a small army of uniformed policemen jumped out of the back and stationed themselves around our home. A couple of them entered the house and seized my father. They harassed him for his beliefs. He was handcuffed and ordered onto the truck. The policemen followed him, effectively blocking any possibility for escape. It just took a few minutes and the truck vanished in a cloud of dust. I chased it for a while.

Those men had stolen my father for being stubborn. His crime was believing in free enterprise, individual achievement, and God. For years he had refused to work for the communists who captured him that day. The communist rulers wanted to try making their point a little more clear by sending him to prison. My father was an outspoken opponent of the system at every opportunity, despite warnings and offers of appeasement if he came to their side.

We were fortunate in escaping that enslaving system a year later. It meant risking our lives, leaving our farm which had been seized by communists earlier anyway, and forfeiting all belongings other than what we could sneak out. In materialistic terms, that was precious little. But we had our lives, and a new opportunity to live in freedom.

The family touched on U.S. soil in 1955. We didn't have much, but Dad had his stubborn streak, which was worth a lot. That's what it takes to get up at 2:30 morning after morning to milk 100 cows. It was a formula which was instrumental in finding new levels of success.

Dad didn't do it all by himself, but as a determined leader, he guided a family effort which required plenty of work, some sacrificing, and unfaltering total dedication to the cause. Some friends and neighbors helped too. But again, it was Dad who saw the opportunities and tackled the challenges.

That stubborn streak makes Dad a rock to be looked up to, even though it makes for hard clashes of wills from time to time.

Not many can match his degree of determination - whether it's in resisting causes he doesn't believe in, or working to provide for his family.

Have a happy Father's Day, everyone.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Voting rules a throwback

Editor; Lancaster Farming:

Voting rules in the upcoming national beef referendum are a throwback to the 19th century.

Husbands and wives who own their cattle jointly have only one vote between them. If the husband casts the vote, the wife is effectively disenfranchised, even though she may disagree with her spouse on which way to vote.

At the same time, a youngster in the family owning only one cow can cast a vote!

To top off matters, large cattle producers would have a greater voice in any vote to do away with the program after it was started than would smaller producers.

What this boils down to is that kids can vote in the program, cattle can vote it out, with women effectively disenfranchised in the process.

In addition, a person who did not own cattle in 1976 but bought some in 1977 is not eligible to vote, even though he would have to pay the beef checkoff assessment when he sells the cattle if the program is approved.

Why should we pay for promoting something that is not an end product? There is no point in promotion if we can't control production.

Sincerely yours,
Wilbur Keller
Litlitz, Pa.

Consumers need no persuasion

Editor, Lancaster Farming
As far as this beef promotion referendum that is coming up goes, I don't think consumers need to be persuaded to eat beef.

If they had more dollars in their pockets, they'd buy a lot more...I know my family and I would eat a lot more beef if we were getting a better price for our cattle. I thing a better price is what we should be working for. I think if we'd really get after the Congress, we would get a lot more help from them than from Madison Avenue.

I don't think all this advertising will be worth the cost and I don't believe it will solve the problem.

Why should we subsidize the chain stores by paying for their promotion and advertising? They won't contribute a cent to the program, and they are the ones who should be advertising if anybody should.

Sincerely,
Forney Longenecker
Lititz

GOOD LUCK OR GOD?

Lesson for June 19, 1977

Background Scriptures:
Exodus 5 through 13.
Devotional Reading:
Exodus 6:2-8

A remarkable change of luck, wouldn't you say? The "washed-up" fugitive and octegenarian "desert-rat" was now a leader of great stature:

...the man Moses was very great in the land of Egypt, in the sight of Pharaoh's servants and in the sight of the people. (Exodus 11:3).

It's not hard for us to believe, for we have seen the same kind of thing happen in our own society: someone just seems to be at the right place at the right time and is catapaulted into fame and fortune. An obscure athlete, actress, writer, politician, or entertainer gets that "sudden break" that changes their whole life and career. "Lucky-dog!" we mutter enviously.

Thus says the Lord

Often, however, (perhaps always), luck has nothing to do with it. We have already noted that part of the picture is a Moses' willingness to "turn aside and see" the burning bush in the middle of a desert. If the "sudden break" is not noticed or responded to, nothing happens. The person who seems blessed with "good luck" is first of all a person who takes advantage of opportunities.

But there is another part of the picture that we are likely to mislabel as "good lauck." Moses would not have become a prominent figure if it had not been that God had something for him to do!

This is evident when we study Moses' negotiations with the Pharaoh. Moses is not speaking for himself. Exodus tells us: "The Lord said to Moses, 'Yet one plague more I will bring upon Pharaoh and upon Egypt; afterwards he will let you go hence' " (11:1). And when Moses speaks to Pharaoh and the people of Egypt, it is not his own message that he brings, but "Thus says the Lord..." (1:4). In setting himself against the people of Israel, Moses says, Pharaoh is not opposing simply the ambitions of a tribe of enslaved subjects, but the will of God himself.

God led the people

Moses was a man of great potential-which was almost never tapped–and he was obviously the man for the job. Yet, by himself he could not have successfully led the people of Israel to the Promised Land. Nor was it "luck" that took them there, but God: "When Pharaoh let the people go, God did not lead them by way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near; for God said, 'Lest the people repent when they see war, and return to Egypt' " (13:17). Nor was God simply the planner of the long-range strategy; he led his people day by day: "the Lord went before them by day in a pillar of cloud to lead them along the way, and by night in a pillar of fire to give them light" (13:21).

Forever alfter the Jews would look back and acknowledge that it was God's will, not good "luck" that rescued them from their bondage.

TO BE CAREFUL WITH TREATED WOOD

There have been some impurities found in some Pentachlorophenol treated wood that can be toxic to animals. This material has been used for years to treat new or green lumber. However, since some cases of poisoning have been traced to this material, we suggest that animal feed should not be allowed to come in contact with the Pentachlorophenol treated wood. Also, animals should not be allowed to chew or lick recenlty treated fences, posts, feed bunks, or other materials. Don't take chances on this material at this time.

TO CHECK SELF FEEDERS

Feed is still the major cost in most livestock and dairy operations. Where there are self feeders being used we urge operators to check these machines to be sure feed is not being wasted. Some worn out feeders will permit 10 to 15 percent waste, which in many cases is the profit margin. Feeders need to be adjusted or repaired often in order to provide feed as the animals consume it. When there is excess feed in the hoppers, then there is the tendency for the feed to be thrown out and wasted; this is especially true in the hog business. Feed efficiency is very important for top returns and feed that is wasted will not produce much milk or weight gains.

TO KEEP HOG BREEDING HERD COOL

Prolonged hot weather will greatly reduce the breeding ability of both boars and sows; research work has shown that extra cooling effort during the breeding period will increase the number of pigs farrowed per litter. Our Penn State Swine Specialist, Dwight Youkin, has several suggestions: 1. Provide plenty of shade, fresh water, and air movement-electric fans will keep the air moving over the hogs. 2. Keep the breeding herd in the coolest and best insulated barn on the farm. 3. Move breeding herd during the cool of early morning and refrain from mixing strange animals as much as possible. 4. Zone-type air conditioning is b... used successfully on ... herds - the increase ... number of pigs farro... pays for the investment. ... comfort for the bre... herd during hot weath... very important.

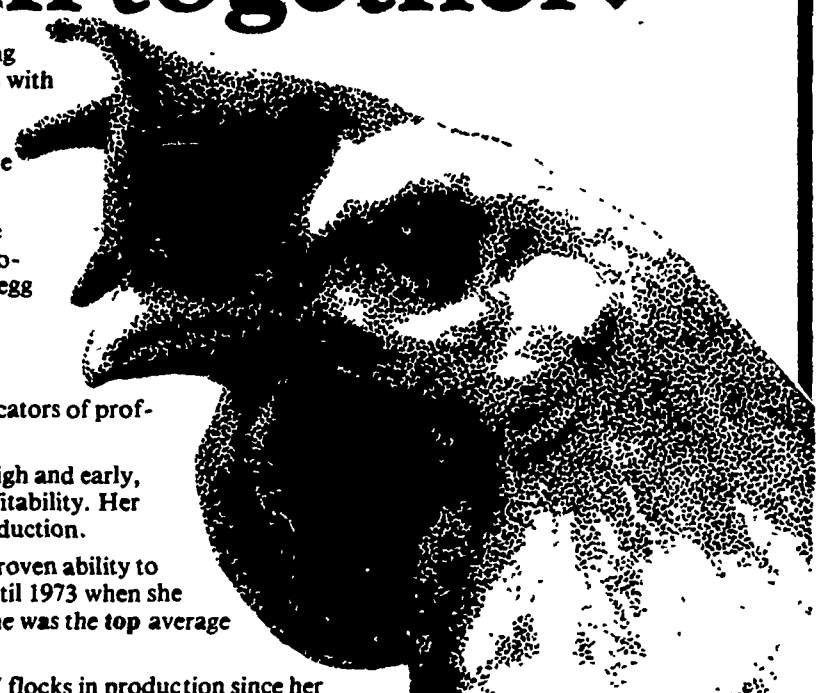
Put it all together!



The Babcock B-300V is rapidly reestablishing herself as the world's top layer. Egg producers with flocks well into production are reporting performance they haven't seen for years . . . from any layer. In many cases, in fact, they are reporting their best performance ever.

But in this business, potential is only half the game. Babcock backs its bird with the most professional, experienced distribution team in the egg industry.

Consider these features:

PRODUCT

The B-300V rates "excellent" in all key indicators of profitable performance:

*EGG PRODUCTION -- The B-300V peaks high and early, for quick recovery of your costs, and early profitability. Her persistency after peak translates to top egg production.

*FEED CONVERSION -- The B-300V has a proven ability to efficiently convert feed to eggs. From 1966, until 1973 when she was withdrawn from Random Sample Tests, she was the top average feed converter in the industry.

*LIVABILITY -- Field results from all B-300V flocks in production since her reintroduction in late '76 indicate she may have far-and-away the best livability in the business.

*EGGSHELL QUALITY -- Eggshell strength is one of the greatest assets of the 1977 B-300V. Between 1972 and 1976, shell strength of eggs produced by B-300V's has improved by a measured 15% in early lay (36 weeks) and 30.8% in late lay (68 weeks).

*RESISTANCE TO STRESS -- We call it "manageability". The B-300V is a calm, adaptable bird. She resists environmental stresses and recovers rapidly from management problems.

SERVICE

The Babcock distribution team has developed service programs to provide each individual grower or egg producer with the optimum product for his specific operation:

*DELIVERY -- Careful, on-time and courteous.

*QUALITY PRODUCTS -- Birds are hatched and/or grown with Babcock technical assistance. Uniform, healthy chicks and started pullets are vaccinated for your area challenges, and are correctly and fully-developed for their age.

*SERVICE -- Experienced, professional service is available before, during and after delivery.

*FLEXIBILITY -- Babcock distributors are equipped to supply the needs of your operation, whatever the size of your order. Cage or floor grown started pullets are available, depending on the needs of your program.

Talk to a professional about your next replacement flock. The businessmen behind the businessman's bird have a performance package tailored to your chick or started pullet program.

Quality and service. Put it all together with Babcock!

Livestock market

Omaha

Compared with the previous week's close: slaughter steers 50-75 lower, heifers 25-50 lower. Cows 3.00-3.50 lower and bulls 3.00-4.00 lower.

Four day receipts 19,500 as compared 20,400 previous week and 20,100 a year ago. Fed cattle prices were forced downward for the seventh successive week in reflection of continued liberal slaughter and an unresponsive carcass trade. Day-to-day price declines were not severe, but the downward pressure was persistent. However, demand remained fairly good by most buying interests as they sought to keep an acceptable ratio between live prices and carcass realizations; supplies were well distributed over the trading period. The steer run included a fair percentage of Choice grade but there was also an increased volume of Good and Low-Choice 975-1050 lb. shortfeds. Much of the dwindling heifer supply was of the Good to average-Choice variety with the price differential between steers and heifers usually narrow. Slaughter steers made up approximately 50 and heifers 28. Cows comprised 14 and feeders 6.

Grain designations revised

ASHINGTON, D.C. - A ge in the U.S. grain dards announced last by the U.S. Depart- of Agriculture will ut federal, state, and ate grain inspectors to ify a load of grain as al to or better than" the mum grade called for in les contract, beginning 12.

nder the revision, when a seller or shipper does not have enough grain on hand that qualifies for the grade required in the sales contract, he can substitute, without separate certification, an unlimited amount of grain that qualifies for a higher grade. For example, if an exporter in the Pacific Northwest has to use No. 1 Western White Wheat to fill a contract calling for No. 2, he can ask the inspector to certify the lot as "U.S. No. 2 or better Western White Wheat," and meet the contract grade requirement. Under previous rules, the exporter would have had to accept a grade certificate for U.S. No. 1 Western White Wheat and risk a claim from the foreign buyer that the wheat sold did not meet the contract grade.

Grain exporters and other interested parties have advised officials of USDA's Federal Grain Inspection Service (FGIS) - and FGIS concurs - that delivery of a higher grade of grain than that specified in the sales contract should not be objectionable to foreign buyers and should not be construed as a failure to meet contract requirements.

Official inspection and grading of grain is mandatory for all grain sold by grade for export and voluntary for domestic trade in grain.

County Council elects officers

NEW YORK, NY - Market news issued by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) would report by weight the volume of fresh fruits and vegetables moving through marketing channels under a proposal announced by USDA. This reporting method would replace the current practice of converting truckload quantities of produce to carlot equivalents - that is, the size of rail car loadings.

Officials of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service (AMS), which provides the market news service, said USDA began measuring shipments by carlot units over 50 years ago when much of the produce going to market was carried by rail. Now, however, about 75 per cent of fresh fruits and vegetables is transported by truck; and carlot equivalents mean little in areas where rail transportation is not used.

Under the proposal, daily and weekly market news reports on produce shipments would be shown in units of 10,000 pounds. Annual summaries would be shown in units of 1,000 hundredweights. AMS officials said this method will make it possible to include low volume commodities, such as artichokes and avocados, in daily reports but will permit consolidating data for more rapid processing and use in annual reports.

Interested persons have until July 11 to comment on the proposal, which was published in the June 9 Federal Register. Written comments should be sent in duplicate to the Hearing Clerk, Room 1077-S, USDA, Washington, D.C. 20250, where they will be available for public inspection.

Lackawanna cow sets butterfat record

SCRANTON - Shey Lucky Grace, bred and owned by George and Paul Sheypuk, Jermyn, in Lackawanna County, is the new state leader in butterfat production for senior 4 year olds with a record high production of 27,670 pounds of milk and 1,180 pounds of butterfat in 305 days on twice a day milking.

No stranger in Lackawanna County for record breaking, Grace was the best two-year old in the County, producing 840 pounds of butterfat in 305 days. In her second lactation she made 1080 of fat carrying twin heifer calves and now its 1180 for a record high production for senior four-year olds in Pennsylvania.

She milked 321 days in her record breaking lactation and finally made 28,165 milk testing 4.3 and 1208 of fat. She was carrying a calf and freshened again on March 23, 1977 is milking 120 pounds a day testing 5.0.

She's a Lucky out of a Kingpin with a dam that made 26,396 of milk and 1025 of fat in 365 days as a junior four-year old. She also had a daughter by Elvation that made 19,510 pounds of milk and 838 of fat in 305 days as a two year old.

Grace is no "flash in the pan". She's had three excellent records; her dam was a high producer and her first daughter is doing nearly as well as she did as a 2 year old. Of course, she's not the only milker in the sheypul herd of 55 cows that last year averaged 19,119 pounds of milk and 748 pounds of fat. Included during the past three years were six cows that made over 1,000 pounds of fat in 305 days.

Shey Lucky Grace is the new state record holder in butterfat for senior 4-year olds milked 305 days. Bred and owned by George and Paul Sheypuk, Jermyn R1, she produced 27,670 pounds of milk and 1,180 of fat to set the new record. Paul Sheypuk is at the halter.

purposes," Manbeck told Lancaster Farming. Manbeck also plans to work on the family farm upon graduating, and possibly continue his education in agricultural mechanics at the local vo-tech school.

Ken Sanner of Kutztown High School feels yields must continue to rise also. "But," he asks, "how far will they be able to?" The amount of research involved in agriculture will have to continue to increase, he said.

Richard Hershey

Ken Sanner

He also believes farm land will always be taken from agricultural use, no matter what measures are eventually taken.

Sanner plans to work on his father's dairy farm but feels it is continually becoming harder for families to work on farms. He sees larger family owned farms involving more laborers other than the family members in the future, the smaller farms won't be able to keep pace with the rising production costs.

Ray Zimmerman

Richard Hershey of Tulpehocken High School, thinks farming in the future will involve much more mangement and less actual labor. "No-till and minimum tillage saves time in the fields but small farms will continue to use conventional tillage methods," predicts Hershey.

Joel Hettrich

There will always be constant changes in agriculture, one change taking place right now is the way farmers are handling manure, commented Hershey. Because everyone is becoming environmentally conscious.

Art Noss

Jeff Bollinger, also of Tulpehocken, agrees with Hershey that chiseling saves time and may be the answer to some problems. Farming keeps involving more investment, he stated, little farms may eventually go because of it.

Norman Manbeck

Joel Hettrick of Tulpehocken, feels management is the key to higher yields. He thinks farmers will have to find ways to feed more cattle per acre. Concerning minimum tillage, he added. "But," he said, "not everyone will go to minimum till, it depends on what's right for different people and their farms."

Manbeck on the other hand feels mimimum tillage won't continue to catch on at the present rate. "We tried it one year," he explained, "and din't get the weed control." "But," he admitted, "everything has it's advantages and disadvantages." Sanner also agreed that weed control is a disadvantage. "Especially this year with volunteer corn," he commented.

Jeff Bollinger

Asked what other changes they felt there would be in the future, Sanner stated that he felt farmers will have to get higher prices for their comodities. If not, more and more farmers will be forced out of business. "The consumer will have to spend more on food." he said. Today people feel that money for cars and material possessions is more important then for their food, but his attitude will

Ag weather service promised

Three officials from Washington D.C. visited the Lancaster Farming office this week to discuss agricultural weather services, an idea which has been reported on in previous issues. The three representatives of federal agencies, were, left to right, Joseph Jacques from the General Accounting Office, Harold Scott of the National Weather Bureau, and Gerald Felde, assistant to Scott. The weather program conceived by these men and associates will be nationwide and is to be in effect in about a year, Lancaster Farming's editor was told. The three men came to the newspaper's office to discuss specific details and acquire information which would be most pertinent to this area. A survey will be conducted in July whereby farmers will have a chance to express their own views and measure the value of present weather information as applied to their individual operations.

Wheat loan rates issued

WASHINGTON, D. C. - County loan and purchase rates for 1977-crop wheat were issued this week by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). The rates are based on the national loan rate for No. 1 grade wheat of $2.25 per bushel, unchanged from 1976, announced April 4 (USDA press release 901-77). Loan rates vary from county to county primarily to reflect differences in transportation costs.

The major changes from 1976 are these:

-adjustments to reflect changes in production patterns and prices received by farmers;

-protein premiums to reflect market demand for higher protein wheats; and

-increases in discounts for No. 2 and No. 3 grade wheats of two and four of one cent per bushel in all major wheat producing states and three cents per bushel in all states east of the Mississippi, and in Arkansas and Louisiana. Minor adjustments were made to individual county rates to retain past county-to-county loan relationships.

Copies of the 1977-crop wheat county loan rates will be sent to state offices of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service (ASCS) and will also be available by writing to the Grains, Oilseeds and Cotton Division, USDA-ASCS, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D.C. 20013.

Diane Fries is Franklin County dairy princess

AYNESBORO - In one largest contests ever locally, Miss Diane Mercersburg, R2 was crowned as 1977 Franklin County Dairy Princess. Diane, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Fries, recently graduated from James Buchanan High School. This fall she plans to enter Shippensburg State College and major in journalism.

During her on-stage interview before the judges and the audience of 255 persons, Diane discussed the variety of milk products as compared to the variety of Americans and the lives they lead. She stressed that milk is "as important to a grandparent as to an infant." Milk also fits the bill for our variety of meals, and its many products can be used for meals for dieters, teenagers, and housewives trying to prepare well-balanced meals. Diane also indicated she is her father's "moral support" on his dairy farm.

First runner-up in the contest was Jean Witter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Witter, Shippensburg, Star Route 1. Jean has graduated from Shippensburg Area Senior High School and will be attending Lancaster Bible College. For her milk promotion, Jean sang a song for which she composed the lyrics to the music from "Black and White," a Three Dog Night composition. The song described the Holstein cow.

Marion Crider, Chambersburg R5, was second runner-up. Marion is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold F. Crider and has graduated from Greencastle-Antrim High School. She hopes to obtain a secretarial job. Her milk promotion idea was directed to younger children with characters from the "Peanuts" comic strip - Charlie Brown, Lucy, Snoopy - telling the importance of milk.

Eileen Crider, Chambersburg R5, crowned the new princess and told the audience of her experiences during the past year in promoting the Franklin County dairy industry.

Harold Gayman, Waynesboro R2, Dairy Promotion Committee chairman, presented emcee and committee member Earl Strine with a plaque from the committee for his service to the local dairy industry. Strine is a local radio personality and has worked with the committee for the last ten years.

Other contestants included Rhonda Harbaugh, Waynesboro R2; Julie Stoner, Mercersburg R2; Doris Woods, Fannettsburg; Wanda Baughman, Fayetteville R1; Ruth Benedict, Waynesboro R1; Trudy Bower, Chambersburg R6; Cindy Fisher, Mercersburg R1, and Tammy Eck, Quincy.

Judges for the contest were Donna Duncan, Cumberland County Dairy Princess committee; John Kimbark, Pennsylvania Farmer Magazine and Theda Cole, home economist from West Penn Power.

Dale Nolt has grand champion at first Lancaster market hog show

By SALLY BAIR
Feature Writer

LANCASTER - Dale Nolt, Green Valley Farm, Manheim R1, received grand championship honors for his pen of ten hogs in the first market hog contest sponsored by the Lancaster Stockyards, Inc. and the Lancaster Livestock Exchange. The grand champions were also champion medium weights.

Reserve grand championship went to Richard Bollinger, Lititz R 4, for his champion lightweight hogs.

At the sale immediately following the show, Ken Hershey purchased the grand champion hogs for Leidy Packing Company, Souderton for $53.85 per hundred weight.

Reserve champions were purchased by Oscar Baumert, Jr., Herndon, for Chief Brand, Shamokin Packing Company for $49.75 per hundred weight.

Nolt, who has about 100 sows in a farrow to finish operation in partnership with his father Martin, said, "I thought the show had a lot of depth with a lot of good hogs. It was a good first show and the judge had a tough job."

Nolt said his feeding program is not special, but he attributed his success to breeding. He said, "I use good purebred boars, which are purchased from local breeders."

A 1971 graduate of the ag program at Manheim Central High School, Nolt also shows in carcass and barrow shows and said he likes participating in shows. "It gives me a chance to meet other breeders. I can learn how to improve hogs and see how the judge picks the winners. We must produce a product the consumer wants, and that means good red meat."

"The Stockyards should be complimented for holding the show. It was good for area breeders," Nolt added.

Reserve champion winner Bollinger said he thought it was a good show. "It is good to have something which has open classes." He added that he was "real pleased and I saw a lot of good hogs." Bollinger graduated from Ephrata High School in 1973.

William McCoy, president of the Stockyards, said, "We think a show helps to promote the industry and it gives breeders a chance to show their breeding and their feeding." We are well pleased with the turnout for the first show.

Organizers of the show included Lloyd Hoover, Pat McCoy and Jack Forsythe. Hoover said, "We feel it was quite successful. After the success we had today it will probably be an annual event. There was a lot of interest created in the county."

The show was judged by James Hoge, York Springs. Winners were as follows:

Heavyweight: 1. Ken Smoker, Atglen; 2. Amos B. Hoover, Denver; 3. Glen S. Burkholder, Denver; 4. Ralph Myer, Manheim; H.E. Kettering, Lancaster.

Mediumweight: 1. Green Valley Farm, Manheim; 2. Jerry Rutter, Dover; 3. Stephen Stoltzfus; 4. Ervin M. Horst, Jr., Ephrata; 5. David Z. Martin.

Lightweight: 1. Richard Bollinger, Lititz; Roy H. Charles, Millersville; 3. Amos Risser, Elizabethtown; 4. David E. White, Manheim.

There were 250 hogs entered in the show.

At the sale which followed the market hog show, the 25 lots averaged $48.15.

Ken Hershey, (left) buyer for Leidy Packing Company, Soudertown, purcha Dale Nolt's grand champion pen of ten market hogs for $53.85 following the Market Hog Show sponsored by the Lancaster Stockyards and Lanca Livestock Exchange.

Holstein entries due

The Lancaster County Holstein Association is now accepting applications for its county show to be held July 28 at the Solanco Fair Grounds, Quarryville.

Standard Pennsylvania Holstein show forms should be used and should be mailed to show chairman Galen Crouse, Stevens R1, 17578 by June 25th. There is a $1.00 entry fee to be made payable to the Lancaster County Holstein Club and accompany entry forms. A late deadline fee of $5.00 is available until July 1. 4-H and FFA project animals are excluded from this fee.

Animals must be on the fairgrounds no later than 7:00 p.m. on Wednesday July 27, and the show will begin promptly at 10:00 a.m. on Thursday. Judge will be Paul King, Delta, prominent York County dairyman. Photographer Jack Remsburg will be available on July 27 and 28 to take pictures of show animals.

In addition to Chairman Crouse, other committee members include Maurice Welk, Quarryville; J. Mowery Frey, Lancaster; and Earl C. Stauffer, Ephrata.

PFA puts health van in gear

HP HILL - Pennia Rural Health Week 13-20) was given an l kickoff here on y with Agriculture ry Kent Shelhamer ing a physical ination from a mobile unit.

dignitaries, headed Governor Ernest were part of the program at the state arters of the Pennnia Farmers' tion (PFA). Other ls included: Dr. d Bachman, Penn- Health Secretary; ny state legislators. health van, operated ilot program by the organization, will be visiting practically every county in the state calling attention to the need for a medical examination.

Agriculture Secretary Shelhamer, following a brief program, took advantage of the facility by having a comprehensive medical examination.

Lt. Governor Kline read from the official proclamation which cited the need for a preventive medical program for rural areas. He explained that some 18 counties in rural Pennsylvania were facing serious medical personnel scarcities.

"Pennsylvania has the largest rural residency population in the United States," Kline pointed out, "These facts make the need for the PFA program vital."

The official proclamation, signed by Governor Shapp, explains that the program "is designed to spare human suffering, prevent disease and to aid the medical profession in rural areas."

Lt. Governor Kline urged rural resisdents to take part in the program.

Mrs. Charles Benner, PFA women's committee chairman, explained that local farmers' associations will be working with other community groups to bring about an awareness of a good preventive medical program.

The local groups will be calling attention to the program through publicity. "Our aim is to secure support from many organizations, business and industry," Mrs. Benner said.

"Through use of the mobile health unit, rural residents can secure a modern, painless and thorough health checkup in a 45-minute appointment," she pointed out.

The health van is staffed by a team of five paramedical technicians and a registered nurse. Tests include chest X-Ray, facial X-Ray, electrocardiogram, lung function test, breast exam, eye test including glaucoma, blood chemistry and hematology, urinalysis, tuberculosis skin test, dental checkup and others.

Earlier Mrs. Benner said the farm organization is initiating the program because of "a real concern about the rising hospitalization and medical costs, lack of medical facilities in some parts of rural Pennsylvania, and to call to the attention of 'Mr. Average' the need for a regular physical checkup."

She said that "Too often we don't take the necessary time for a medical examination. Through this program illnesses and disease can be detected in the early stage - eliminating potentially high medical bills, needless suffering and loss of human lives."

The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association is a general farm organization with more than 21,600 family members throughout Pennsylvania.

Secretary of Agriculture Kent Shelhamer is shown being prepared for his chest X-ray by Michelle, one of the team of paramedics manning the American Health Profiles van following the kickoff ceremonies at PFA state headquarters in Camp Hill, Monday, June 13, 1977.

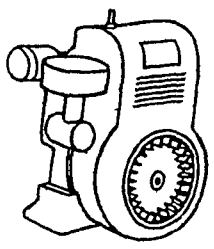
ll air-cooled engines re NOT created equal



It's easier to call an engine "heavy duty" than it is to build it that way. Many carburated "heavy duty" industrial engines simply don't deserve the title. They consume expensive fuel at an alarming rate they are prone to break down or overheat and their life expectancy is measured in hundreds of hours. If any engine in the world qualifies as heavy duty, it's Deutz. Deutz engines are often chosen to power equipment with unit price tags over half a million dollars—that's heavy duty.

When it comes to cooling efficiency, the Deutz precision engineered axial-flow cooling air blowers have no equal. This direct approach to cooling (without coolants, additives, cavitation) means our engines need only about 50% of the air volume liquid-cooled engines require. Combustion efficiency is greatly improved by higher head temperatures and engine life is extended by cooler oil temperatures.

If you think air-cooled engines are prone to overheat, talk to Deutz users in the scorching heat of the Imperial or San Joaquin valleys. There, Deutz engines deliver more than 20,000 hours of trouble-free service before a major overhaul.

There are lots of things that separate Deutz engines from water-cooled and other air-cooled engines. Things like blower design, big lube oil coolers, oil-cooled pistons, special alloy cylinder heads, a research and development team of more than 1,000 engineers. These are all important advantages. Still we say: If you can find an engine that uses less fuel than a Deutz—buy it.

Debra Crider named Guernsey Queen

LITTLE BRITAIN, Pa. Debra Crider, 19, was named the 1977 Pennsylvania Guernsey Queen at a meeting of the Pennsylvania Junior Guernsey Breeders Association at State College last Saturday.

This marks the second year that the honor has come to Lancaster County; Debra was crowned by outgoing Queen Jane McSparran, daughter of Mrs. and Mrs. Robert McSparran, Peach Bottom. First runner-up was Alisa Fava, Jefferson County.

Debra, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Crider, Nottingham R2, is an ardent Guernsey support, who says without hesitation, "Guernsey milk is the best."

As the state Queen, Deb received an all-expense paid trip to Madison, Wis. to participate in the National Guernsey Show and the World Guernsey Conference while there. The national Queen travels all over the country on behalf of the Guernsey industry.

Deb explained that her duties will include handing out ribbons at shows, including the Farm Show and the State Guernsey show, and she will help with sales at the Guernsey Sale Barn. She said it is hoped that the Queen will be used more extensively than in the past, and she feels the title is a promotional opportunity.

Why does Deb favor Guernsey milk? She said, "I would choose Guernsey milk mainly for flavor. It contains more solids than other milks and provides more nutrition per glass of milk."

Guernsey cows, this supporter says, are a good choice of dairy animal "because of profit over feed costs. They don't eat much and give a lot of milk," she explained simply.

Deb has had lots of first-hand experience with Guernsey cows, having helped with the chores on her family's farm since she was small. They are now milking about 50 animals with nearly 120 in their herd.

There were four contestants in the state contest, and all the girls were required to take a written test which included questions on the Guernsey breed and related dairy industry questions. They also had individual interviews with the judges who found out how much the girls knew about the labeling of Guernsey milk, their knolwedge of milk nutrients and their activities.

Part of the judging was done as the contestants told the audicence how being the state Queen would help them. Deb recalls that she replied, "It will help me be able to speak and express my thoughts. It will also give me an opportunity to meet breeders around the state, since I mostly know Lancaster County breeders now."

A sophomore at Houghton College, New York, Deb is majoring in pre-med and would like to be accepted at Hershey Medical Center. While she acknowledges that her pre-med studies keep her pretty busy, she has found time to be floor chaplain, play house league basketball and be a leader for a third grade group of Pioneer girls.

Her success in the state contest, Deb says, came as a result of her long and varied experience in 4-H. She joined when she was eight and has been showing cows ever since. She owned ten cows through her 4-H career, and still owns five of them. She has shown several grand champions along the way, and participated in county, district and state shows. For her excellent work she received the 4-H Record Book Award two times, and she also received the Outstanding Guernsey Youth Award.

Pennsylvania's new Guernsey Queen is enthusiastic about h breed.

Deb said, "I can't stop talking about 4-H. It has definitely helped me. I wouldn't even have been in the state contest if it hadn't been for 4-H because that's how I learned about the Junior Guernsey Breeders."

She is vice-president of the Pennsylvania Junior Guernsey Breeders Association, having been a member for six years. In 4-H she was a member of County Council, participated in the Colorado exchange trip and presented many slide programs on the total 4-H program.

Always a milk enthusiast, Deb was in the Lancaster County Dairy Princess contest in 1975 and was voted Miss Congeniality by other contestants.

On her summer vac Deb is working on the f and serves as a tour gui the Robert Fu birthplace.

As Deb discusses feelings about Guer cows it is easy to see tha will be a strong promot her position as Pennsylv Guernsey Queen.

Prices announced

ALEXANDRIA, Va. - Market Administrator Joseph D. Shine has announced a May base milk price of $10.06 per hundredweight for the Middle Atlantic Marketing Order and an excess milk price of $8.45. The weighted average May price is $9.85 and the butterfat differential for the month is 11.6 cents. The May 1977 base milk price is up six cents from April and is 22 cents below last May's price. Order No. 4 prices are announced for 3.5 per cent milk f.o.b. plant location within 55 miles of Philadelphia, Pa. and also within 75 miles from the nearer of Washington, D.C. or Baltimore, Md. There is a 6-cent direct-delivery differential applicable to producer milk recieved at plants located within 55 miles of Philadelphia.

Shine reported that May producer receipts totaled 506.0 million pounds, an increase of 1.1 per cent from April on an average daily basis, and 5.0 per cent above a year ago. Class I producer milk accounted for 53.29 per cent of total May deliveries, compared to 55.54 per cent in April and 55.63 per cent last year. Base milk represented 87.29 per cent of total May production. A total of 8,061 dairymen supplied Middle Atlantic Order handlers during the month and the average daily delivery per producer was a record high 2025 pounds, 121 pounds or 6.4 per cent above the May 1976 daily average. This was the third consecutive month that a new high was established in the average daily delivery per producer.

Middle Atlantic Order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk sales of 7.40 million pounds per day during May. When adjustment for variation in calendar composition is made, May fluid sales were 2.8 per cent below April and 1.0 per cent below May 1976.

Co-ops eligible in support programs

WASHINGTON, D. C. - Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland recently announced that approved cooperative marketing associations may now participate on behalf of their members in authorized price support programs for barley, corn, oats, rye, sorghum and wheat. Proposed revisions in the regulations to make this change were published for comment on April 12, 1977. Over 5,000 comments were received and reviewed as input in making the decision. Revised regulations will be issued in the near future.

For many years, eligible cooperatives have been authorized to take out Commodity Credit Corporation (CCC) loans on behalf of eligible producer members on cotton, honey, rice and soybeans.

Any marketing cooperative, regardless of size, may apply for approval to obtain CCC price support loans for their members. Cooperatives desiring to participate may obtain application forms from the director, Grains, Oilseeds and Cotton Division, Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, P.O. Box 2415, Washington, D. C. 20013. Considerations on which approval is based include financial condition, membership requirements, voting and other operating procedures, and type of marketing program.

An approved cooperative would apply to its local ASCS county office for a CCC loan on eligible commodities delivered to the cooperative by its producer members. Individual producers, as in the past, may continue to apply for CCC commodity loans at the ASCS county offices.

American Egg Board recommends changing check-off ruling

PARK RIDGE, Ill. - Members of American Egg Board voted last week to recommend changes in the rules and regulations implementing the Egg Research and Promotion Order to clarify refunding and "first handler" responsibilities.

A proposed change to Section 1250.523 of the rules and regulations would bring it into agreement with Section 1250.349 of the Order, so that they would both call for refund applications to be filed in a period no more than 90 days after the end of the month in which the assessments are due and collectible. Currently the rules and regulations allow refunds to be made if requested within 90 days after the assessment is paid.

The second proposed change modifies Section 1250.516 of the rules and regulations. The change would allow a producer-handler who pays the assessment on eggs he grades, cartons, or breaks to also remit the assessment on eggs he sells nest run.

The proposed changes have been submitted to the USDA for consideration.

Jonas Dull, left, and John Gladfelter, crop personnel for John Shearer, York R6, fill liquid fertilizer tanks for planting the Summer string bean crop.

Keith Shearer, York R6, works down a former pea field for planting of a second table crop -- string beans. Shearer's 250 horses-under hood can ready up to 12 acres h pulling a 25-foot disk.

Beans in need of rain

By JOYCE BUPP
York County Reporter

YORK NEW SALEM, Pa. - Say "beans" to most grain farmers and visions of far-reaching fields of soybeans pop into their heads. Not so for John Shearer, grain and vegetable grower from York R6.

Shearer crops a thousand acres of the string variety of table beans. Green beans account for 875 of those acres, with the other 125 in yellow wax beans.

Planting of the beans has been progressing since May and will continue up into mid-July, when the earliest-cropped acreage will be ready for picking.

"We really need rain, though," emphasizes Shearer. "It's no use we put them out if there's insufficient moisture in the ground."

John Gladfelter, "official bean planter" as his fellow employees call him, puts 50 acres of beans in the ground on a "good' day. But Gladfelter is concerned because those early plantings aren't coming through the ground up to par, leaving spotty fields with resulting low yield potentials.

It's double vegetables for many of the bean acres, which earlier produced a crop of green peas. From peas to beans may take less than a day, if weather and machinery allow. Fields are plowed, disked and rolled, and beans put in the ground with a boost of 10-34-0 liquid fertilizer.

An innovative user of his acres, Shearer's double cropping helps him make maximum use of his land, his machinery and his men.

"Farming is a competitive business," emphasizes Shearer. "and a farmer has to be flexible and market-oriented to make the best use of what he's got available."

PP&L wants coal

ALLENTOWN - Pennsylvania Power & Light Company is shopping around for supplies of "silt" anthracite coal for its two oldest coal-burning plants.

Clark D. Harrison, fossil fuel specialist-Fuel Purchasing & Transportation, has already had eight offers from people who either have banks of silt or will be producing some in the future. He will continue throughout the summer to scour the anthracite region of Pennsylvania for existing silt banks that have fuel potential.

Silt coal was once a troublesome by-product of the anthracite industry, which collieries discarded on unsightly culm banks, many of which washed into nearby streams.

"What I'm looking for are existing supplies of silt - culm banks - which can be obtained for the purpose of guaranteeing fuel for the old Sunbury and Holtwood plants."

Harrison said Holtwood may burn as much as 27,000 tons per month this year, and Sunbury will average about 42,000 tons of anthracite silt per month. "The tons per year that they burn will probably decrease as time goes on," he added, 'but based on present comsumption, we may be looking for deposits that total as much as 15 million tons. Our only requirements are that the silt can be stored in a manner that's environmentally sound, that it be of satisfactory burning quality, and that it be possible to reclaim it with standard earth-moving equipment."

airy farmers receive $8.98

YORK, N.Y. - Dairy rs supplying milk regulated under the York-New Jersey eting orders during ill be paid on the basis niform price of $8.98 ndred pounds or 19.3 uart. Market Adrator Thomas A. n, who announced price, also stated that iform farm price was er hundredweight in April 1977 and $8.90 per hundredweight in May 1976. The uniform price is a marketwide weighted average of the value of farm milk used for fluid and manufactured dairy products.

The seasonal incentive fund (Louisville Plan) removed a total of $3,665,224.22 or $.40 per hundredweight from the dairy farmers' uniform price for May. Deductions for this fund started in March and will continue through June. The fund, plus interest, will be distributed in the August through November uniform price calculations.

The total amount of milk received from the 18,927 dairy farmers supplying the New York-New Jersey Marketing Area was 916,306,056 pounds during May 1977. This was more than 5 million pounds below last year. The gross value to dairy farmers for milk deliveries was $82,968,434.96. Wilson explained that this included differentials required to be paid to dairy farmers but not voluntary premiums or deductions authorized by the farmer.

Regulated milk dealers (handlers) utilized 377,074,526 pounds or 41.2 per cent of the total amount of milk for Class I. The Class I milk is used for fluid products such as homogenized, flavored, low-test and skim milks. For May 1977, handlers paid $10.71 per hundredweight for the milk used in Class I products compared with $11.00 a year ago.

The balance of the milk, 58.8 per cent, was used to manufacture Class II products including butter, cheese, ice carem and yogurt. For this milk the handlers paid $8.50 per hundredwieght.

The uniform price is based on milk containing 3.5 per cent butterfat. For May 1977, a differential of 11.6 cents was applied to the price for each one-tenth of one per cent that the milk tested above or below the 3.5 per cent standard.

All prices quoted are for milk received within the 201-210 mile zone from New York City.

Poultry conference set

separate day - long conferences for the broiler, egg, and turkey industries, there will be a hatchery seminar in the morning. Hatcherymen will get an update on sanitation procedures and a look at a relatively new procedure-heat treatment of eggs for microplasma control. Hatcherymen then will be free to attend other conferences throughout the day. All attendees will come together to hear Harold Ford, executive director of the Southeastern Poultry and Egg Association, discuss the problems ahead with a new administration in Washington and the perennial favorite-the price outlook for feed, broilers, eggs, and turkeys by Dr. Ralph Baker of Ohio State University.

The annual banquet in the evening is also surpassing last year's registration. Most conference attendees stay on for the banquet but each year there are a number of smaller poultrymen who cannot get away for the day but come in the evening for the banquet. Increased interest in the banquet is attributed to adding entertainment and recognizing three outstanding industrymen this year-Broiler Industryman of the Year, Egg Industryman of the Year, and Turkey Industryman of the Year. The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation's philosophy that this huge and growing Pennsylvania industry ought to have one large state conference annually where the feather industry comes together seems to be moving from a philosophy to a reality in short order.

PENNSYLVANIA POULTRY FEDERATION YOUTH DAY
June 27, 1977

The Pennsylvania Poultry Federation's Annual Youth Day is scheduled for Monday, June 27, 1977, and will include a tour of the Agway Computerized Warehouse in Elizabethtown and the Paul Konhaus farms and super markets in Mechanicsburg. The bus for the tour can be boarded at two locations - the Lancaster Farm and Home Center departing sharply at 8:30 a.m. and again at the Agway Computerized Warehouse located on Route 230 between Middletown and Elizabethtown departing sharply at 9:15 a.m. The group will tour Konhaus Farms in the morning, have lunch in the Harrisburg area (lunch provided by PPF) and return to the Agway Computerized Warehouse for an afternoon tour of that facility. Following that tour the bus will return to the Lancaster Farm and Home Center concluding the tour between 3:15 and 4:15 p.m. Students are responsible for their own transportation to the bus boarding centers (Farm and Home Center and Agway Computerized Warehouse).

numerous groups and individuals interested in the preservation of farmland.

"However, the Committee cannot be aware of every such case in the State, and that is why we need HB 111 to provide farms with some legal protection from condemnation.

"Our agricultural land in Pennsylvania is an invaluable natural resource, and it is essential that the land be preserved for farming," Wenger said.

"I am encouraged by the unanimous approval of HB 111 to think that public officials have finally come to recognize the importance of farming and the preservation of productive farms."

The Lancaster County case Wenger referred to was that of the Barley Brothers, who received wide and persistent coverage of their plight in local news media, including Lancaster Farming. Members of the House Ag Committee came to the Barley farm at the suggestion of Rep. Gibson Armstrong, Willow Street, to study the situation first-hand. All the public support shown in that case (10,500 signatures were collected) is believed to have had a significant effect in the passage of HB 111 by all 192 voting members.

PROTECT YOURSELF AGAINST HIGHER DAIRY BUILDING PRICES.

The price of just about everything a farmer buys these days keeps going right on up, cutting into profit margins and making it tougher to come out ahead. That's why updating your building facilities is so important. It can help cut your costs, and make dairying much more profitable in the years ahead. Every year we help hundreds of dairy farmers do just this, and we'd like to help you too. If you've been thinking about new facilities for all or any part of your operation, now is a good time to talk to the Wickes Buildings people about it. We'll come up with a plan that will give you everything you're looking for at a price you can afford. Building prices will never be lower.

Senate ag committee expanded

HARRISBURG - Expansion of the Pennsylvania Senate's Agricultural Committee was called "a long overdue step" by Henry G. Hager, Senate minority leader.

At the request of the Republican Caucus, he said, the number of committee members will be increased from ten to twelve members.

"Agriculture is the state's number one industry," Hager said, "and the Senate action accords major status to the standing committee that has responsibility for legislation in this important area."

Hager said Sen. J. Doyle Corman of the 34th District will serve as the Republican chairman of the committee. Corman, who was elected to the Senate in the special election on May 17th, represents Cameron, Centre and Clearfield counties and parts of Cambria and Mifflin counties.

Lower yields and prices face pea growers

Kenneth Fritz, Benton R3, Columbia County, heads up a field crew for Hanover Brands. "It's only about half a crop," he says, checking the windrows.

Green pea combines, a rather unusual piece of machinery, cause most farmers to look a second time.

By JOYCE BUPP
York County Reporter

YORK NEW SALEM, Pa. - Passing the green peas at next Winter's dinner table just might cost vegetable lovers an extra few cents.

Green pea harvesting has been underway in York County since May 30, but yields are way down compared to other years.

"We're only getting about half of the usual crop," figured Kenneth Fritz, supervisor of the field crew picking the crop for Hanover Brands, Inc., of Hanover, Pa. Fritz's team of six pea combines and two pea cutters, quite similar to hay windrowers, criss-crossed the fields at the John Shearer farm, York R6, harvesting about four acres hourly.

Dry weather has taken its toll of the vegetable crop, with the Alaska variety of peas unusually short in length of pod, holding an average of only four or five peas each. While quality of the crop rated high, yields were totaling only about 1200 to 1400 pounds per acre, Fritz estimated.

Shelled peas are unloaded from the filled combine bins onto waiting bulk trucks and rushed to the Hanover processing plant for washing. From there, the crop is reloaded on other bulk trucks, iced to retain peak quality, and taken to Bloomsburg, Columbia County. The Bloomsburg plant quick freezes the peas for food industry distribution.

Fritz's field crew, which includes a number of college-vacationing tractor drivers, is responsible for harvesting about 800 acres throughout central York County, while one other Hanover company crew works near the home plant cutting another 500 acres.

Three hundred pounds of peas per acre are drilled in the ground by late March or early April, according to John Shearer, one of the largest independent vegetable croppers in the county. Seed bed preparation includes working in 500 pounds per acre of a 10-20-5 fertilizer just ahead of the drill.

Lower yields this year have not meant higher returns to the grower, however. Contract price for the crop was $135, down from the 1976 figure per ton.

Supervising the clutch of field machines and keep them in top-no mechanical repair ta Fritz throughout the stat the scattered vegeta growing area. He's b traveling with the harvest convoy since 1968.

"We'll move to Ce County next," Fritz dicated. "The machines moved across the road tractors; we don't load t on trucks for hauling. trip'll take us about a da make." Pea harves there will continue thru first week of July."

From there the veget picking equipment will m to Fritz's home area Bloomsburg, where s corn and string bean vesting will begin.

First combined barley

...d could raise the current ...w moisture levels.

"Barley won't take on ...oisture as readily as ...eat," added Sprenkle, "but it shows the best quality when it first ripens."

Ned Kopp, of the A.C. Henry Mill, in Seven Valleys, agreed that it's a promising crop, but felt it won't be 100 per cent of the usual York County yield totals. He also predicted that the price probably won't climb any higher.

A spokesman for Stewartstown Milling, Stewartstown, commented that they had received only one load by Tuesday. However, he too felt that the crop looked "pretty good," with rumors from the southern end of the county of scattered fields of the early barley that might yield as high as 100 bushels to the acre.

Shrewsbury area farmer, John S. Thompson, ran the combine through his fields a few times Monday and parked it back in the shed.

"We were getting too much 'ride-through'; the straw is just too damp and the grains are carrying through with it and out the back," Thompson felt.

Thompson could find no pest problems with the grain crop, but did point out one moisture-lacking symptom. "The straw looks okay, but right below the head of the grain the stem is kinked a little bit. That's an indication that we should have had more rain in the early part of May," he noted. Thompson estimated his yields to tally in the 75 to 80 bushel area.

"Anyway, it's a whole lot better than last year – but I don't really know all the reasons why," concluded Thompson.

Early indications are that this year's barley in York County is better than average despite some adverse weather, including drought and severe cold.

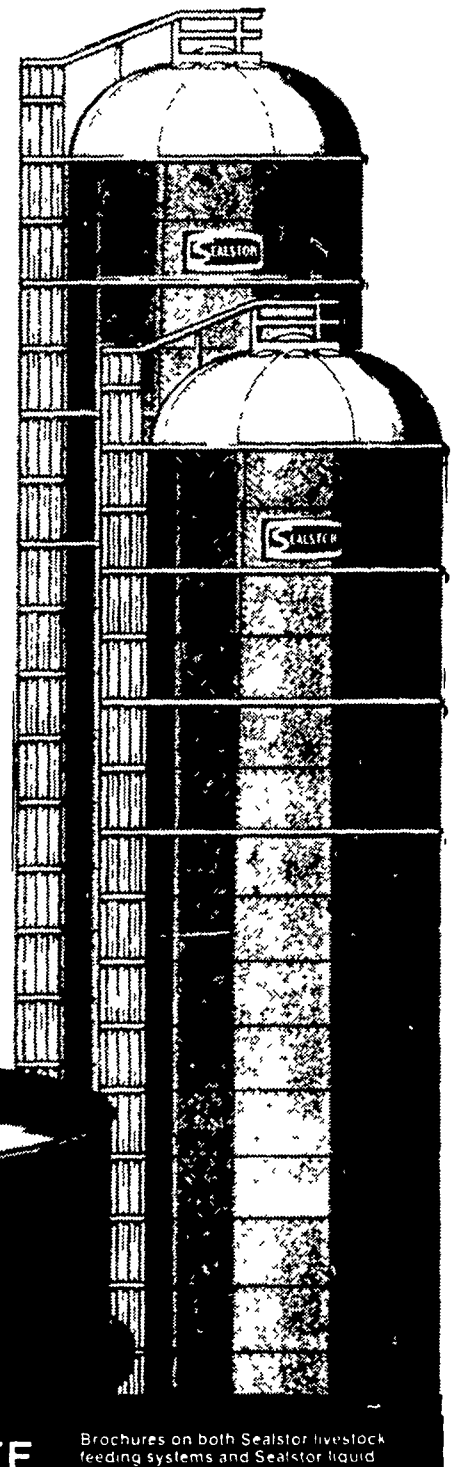
Now you can SEALSTOR® feed for both your livestock and your land.



The Oxygen Limiting SEALSTOR System

For the past 27 years, the makers of Sealstor systems have manufactured thousands of quality glass-fused-to-steel products for agriculture and industry. Today, we offer a complete range of sizes in forage and grain structures. Before you buy any oxygen-limiting, top-loading, bottom-unloading feeding system, check Sealstor's features.

Pound for pound, our fiber-glass roof is stronger than steel. It has fewer panels, fewer seams, fewer bolts. It absorbs less heat. The steps are recessed in the roof for safety and the dome shape provides more useable storage space. (Grain and Forage structures — 6,000 to 42,000 bushels.)

Our rugged, sweep-arm auger unloader has no costly chains to break. "Short-arming" is unnecessary. Yet you get higher volume, push-button feed delivery.

The SEALSTOR Liquid Manure Control Center

Sealstor offers the widest range of sizes in glass-steel liquid manure storage structures. You can start with a 10' or 15' above-ground height and later expand to a 15' or 20' height. For additional strength, all vertical seams are double-bolted. For more positive containment, more sealant is used. (Liquid Manure storage tanks — 60,000 to 750,000 gallons.)

It's your money. Send for the facts We believe you'll select Sealstor.

Legislation introduced to cut union privileges

HARRISBURG - The Pennsylvania Legislature owes it to the citizens of the Commonwealth to take quick action on the Right to Work bill which was recently introduced, declared Pennsylvanians for Right of Work President James Scott II.

The Right to Work bill, introduced in the Pennsylvania House by Representative Fred C. Noye (R-Duncannon), simply states that "No person shall be denied the opportunity to obtain or retain employment because of membership or non-membership in any social, political, labor or religious organization or be required to make any payment, directly or indirectly, to a social, political, labor, religious organization or for its benefit as a condition of employment."

In introducing the Right to Work bill, Representative Noye said, "Right to Work legislation reflects the majority opinion of Pennsylvania citizens. It does not restrict legitimate union activities. It simply is designed to protect the rights of individual Pennsylvania employees. The right to work at one's job without being required to pay tribute to a private organization is certainly consistent with true principles of democracy."

Co-sponsors of the Right to Work bill were State Representatives Gibson E. Armstrong (Willow Street), Kenneth E. Brandt (Bainbridge), James M. Burd (Saxonburg), Harold F. Mowery, Jr. (Camp Hill), Roosevelt I. Polite (Hatfield), Noah W. Wenger (Stevens), and Herbert K. Zearfoss (St. Davids).

Right to Work spokesman Scott urged the House to head the will of the people, who overwhelmingly favor freedom of choice regarding union membership. Scott cited a recent Opinon Research Corporation poll which showed that 75 percent of the American public beieve every wage earner should have the right to get and hold a job regardless of union membership or non-membership. The same poll showed that 72 per cent of all U.S. citizens think their state should have the Right to Work law. These poll results are consistent with the findings of every public opinion survey taken on the subject by polling companies, news media, and state legislators in Pennsylvania, according to Mr. Scott. He referred to the most recent poll taken in Pennsylvania by Representative Zearfoss of his constituents. The favorable response of 80.6 per cent to the Right to Work question convinced the State legislator that he should add his name to the bill, said Mr. Scott.

"Although Right to Work is primarily an issue of individual civil rights," Scott continued, "enactment of a Right to Work law would give Pennsylvania's ailing economy a shot in the arm. History has shown that freedom nurtures a healthy economic climate, and the statistics prove that the freedom of Right to Work is particularly important," he said.

Scott quoted U.S. Department of Labor figures showing that two-thirds of the new manufacturing jobs created in the nation in the decade since 1965 were in the 20 states which ban compulsory union membership. "While manufacturing employment in the 20 Right to Work states increased an average of 23 per cent, in the 30 states which permit compulsory unionism a five per cent decrease was registered. Pennsylvania fared even worse, with a 10 per cent loss," Scott said.

"Ignoring these economic realities as well as the moral correctness of individual freedom of choice, the Pennsylvania Legislature in the past has bowed to the demands of powerful union officials that Right of Work legislation be buried," Scott declared. "The question for the members of the 1977 Legislature is simple: Will they respond to the will of the people by enacting the Right to Work bill? Or will they continue to give u officials special privileg the expense of b individual freedoms?"

Pennsylvanians for R to Work is a coalitio employers and emplo from all walks of including union mem who believe that every earner should have the to get and hold a regardless of u membership or membership.

Action was brisk at the Berks County Wool Pool last week.

Wool brings 79 cents

READING - There was activity at the Reading Fair Grounds June 8th, as sheep producers from Berks and surrounding counties brought their wool in to be graded, packed, and sold.

This year a total of 23,849 pounds of wool was marketed through the pool, an increase of almost 2000 pounds from a year earlier.

Prices received for the wool were also better than the year earlier. Wool growers received 79.3 cents per pound for ⅜th to ¼ staple (or medium wool). It was estimated by Clyde Myers, Berks County Extension Agent, that 80 per cent of the wool sold by the pool was of this grade.

Other prices were as follows: ⅜th to ¼ clothing - 72.3 cents per lb.; medium rejects - 60.3 cents per lb.; low ¼ - 73.3 cents per lb.; fine staple - 67.3 cents per lb.; ½ staple - 67.3 cents per lb.; fine and ½ clothing - 60.3 cents per lb.; fine and ½ rejects - 57..3 cents per lb.; Tags - 21.3 cents per lbs.

A total of 134 bags of wool were shipped to Burlington Industries Wool Company, the buyer.

Want to watch a mountain under construction? The only way is to observe an erupting volcano. In 1943 a Mexican farmer had such an experience, right in his own cornfield. One evening he noted a little smoke and an odor of sulfur coming from his field. Next morning there was a 30-foot hill, spewing smoke and ashes. After a year, his cornfield has become a 1,000-foot-high volcano, known as Paricutin.

Why does the ocean have so many different colors? Mainly because of what lives in its waters. For example, the reddish color sometimes seen in antarctic waters may reveal the presence of millions of krill - tiny, shrimp-like creatures on which many great whales feed. Vast numbers of tiny aquatic plants color many coastal seas green or blue-green. By contrast open ocean, characterized by a clear blue color, is too far from land to receive much in the way of nutrients, thus has little microscopic life to adulterate the color.

Wildlife talk slated

LANCASTER- An expert in Pennsylvania wildlife will present a slide-talk at Pequea Creek Recreation Area at Lake Aldred on July 2, at 8:30 p.m.

Lou Hoffman is a wildlife specialist with the Pennsylvania Game Commission and a former biology teacher in Spring Grove. His talk is entitled "Wild Things and Places in Pennsylvania" and focuses on locations, plants and animals which are off the beaten path and usually not observed.

Hoffman is a graduate of Millersville State College and holds a Masters Degree in wildlife management from The Pennsylvania State University.

Pequea Creek is one of several recreation areas and campgrounds managed by Pennsylvania Power & Light Company (PP & L) which generates electricity at its Holtwood Hydroelectric Project on Lake Aldred.

Hoffman's talk is part of PP & L's new summer nature program at the lake which began Memorial Day with the addition of a full-time summer naturalist at PP & L's Holtwood office. Lee Schisler will be available 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily except Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Schisler is a graduate of the Pennsylvania State University and holds a Bachelors Degree in recreation and parks.

The original purpose of the fountain was to serve ice cream and soft drinks but this has been expanded to sandwiches. They offer fast service. The fountain does not require linen or place mats and guests are served while sitting on stools at a counter.

Light food, cooked to order, is served along with ready-to-serve foods in the luncheonette. In some cases the luncheonette is combined with a fountain. It does not use waiting personnel or table line, but usually provides greater menu variety than does the fountain.

at home as well as for neighbors. Her father is an ABS representative in addition to farmer.

While her farming chores would seem like enough to keep her busy, Miss Barker is a full-time student and very active within her FFA Chapter, of which she has been elected president for a second term. She was secretary of the Chapter during her sophomore year. Her honors and awards cover achievements in dairy production, poultry production, public speaking, crop production and record keeping. She is a member of the United Methodist Church in Ulysses, the Holstein-Friesian Association of America and a junior delegate to Dairylea Cooperative.

Miss Barker has also been active in the show ring, an activity which she began about the time she stood at eye-level to a cow's knee. Now she's five feet six inches tall. She has been milking cows since age 10, but until this Spring it was just to pinch-hit for their former herdsman. An avid student of the dairy industry, she knows her pedigrees.

The new princess won her title competing against 11 other girls and now has the official job of representing the Pennsylvania FFA at official functions. As an award for her achievement she'll take part in National FFA activities in Kansas City, Mo., later this year. Runner-up in the contest was Marlene Clawson of Westmoreland County.

Miss Barker's FFA advisor is Roland Duperron. Her goals for the coming year or two - aside from keeping her dairy interest going - are running for state FFA office and spending some time abroad in the FFA exchange program.

Customers need to learn to speak out for their nutritional needs. There are several ways the consumer can protest low nutrition and perhaps influence the menu offerings of local restaurants. An excellent technique is to speak with the restaruant manager. Protest when two or three starches are served with a meal. If you are served overcooked or poorly cooked vegetables, let the management know you are unhappy with the food. When overcooked, vegetables loose nearly all their nutritional value. One of the main reasons so many people say they don't care for vegetables is because they have never tasted them cooked properly.

As it costs more and more to eat out, a growing number of customers have decided they are tired of paying for an oversized meal that they can never finish.

The grill is equipped to serve cooked-to-order foods and light lunches, particularly broiled foods. Waiting personnel are not usually employed. The menu is limited but service is fast.

xxx

More table service restaurants and fast food chains are adding appetizer or salad buffets to give their establishments a unique touch. This type of combined buffet service also gives customers something to occupy their time while their food is being prepared.

have to change, he continued.

Manbeck also has feelings on the same lines. In mentioning grass fed beef versus grain fed, he felt the grain fed animals will continue to dominate the market, even though consumers say they want the grass fed beef. "The consumer will buy the beef regardless," he added. "People have to eat," explained Manbeck, "they won't all become vegetarians."

Ray Zimmerman of Conrad Weiser, was not raised on a farm but has worked for a local farmer. He plans to continue working on a farm after graduation. He feels it is too expensive to get established and isn't sure what the future will hold. "I especially like the field work as opposed to milking cows," he commented.

Bollinger does not live on a farm either. He had worked for five years on a dairy farm but is taking a full time job in a foundry after graduation. He plans to work off the farm and hopefully save enough money to buy a small farm to get started, as he would continue to support himself with his outside occupation.

Farm Bureau wants clear grading

RIDGE, Ill. - Allan president of the an Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), has requested that Secretary of Agriculture Bob Bergland act to clear up the confusion associated with the grade and yield system of hog buying.

"Producers are confused by these different carcass buying and pricing systems," Grant said in a letter to Bergland. "They lack confidence in the basic integrity of the transaction and are reluctant to use any hog carcass buying system."

Grant said that many progressive hog farmers would like to sell on a carcass basis because it gives the producer a way to evaluate the effectiveness of quality improvement programs in breeding and management.

"The conglomeration of packer grade and yield systems in the United States, in which each packer has his own unique grading, pricing and accounting system, has hampered the development of hog grading - the original purpose of carcass buying," Grant said.

"Moreover, because of their detrimental effects on price comparability," he added, "these different carcass buying systems impede price competition between packers."

Grant's letter to Bergland was the result of recommendations made by the AFBF Swine Advisory Committee and approved by the AFBF Board of Directors.

In his letter, Grant admitted that the current confusion in carcass buying systems is a "large and important problem" that will involve several different agencies within the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA), but one to which he hopes the department will give serious attention and study.

Other recommendations made by the Swine Advisory Committee and approved by the AFBF Board included one that concerned pseudorabies, a serious swine disease that has been detected in 23 states.

On May 27, USDA published proposed pseudorabies regulations in the Federal Register, with July 26, 1977 as the deadline for comments.

Another committee recommendation encouraged implementation of an identification program for sows and boars designed to detect infected herds to facilitate disease eradication. It is expected that such a program, tied to brucellosis eradication and providing indemnities for swine depopulated because of disease traceback, will be published in the Federal Register this Summer.

Following recommendations of the Swine Committee, Farm Bureau has inititated government contacts requesting that the u.s. Surgeon General reconsider the current condemnation requirements for carcasses which show what are called "tuberculosis lesions" to determine if condemnation is actually necessary to protect human health.

Another committee recommendation related to cooking and feeding garbage to swine and regulations governing the movement of garbage-fed hogs to market to prevent the spread of hog cholera and other diseases.

Recently, AFBF has urged that steps be taken to tighten garbage cooking requirements where the feeding of garbage has not been prohibited and to enforce regualations to stop the use of illegal hog cholera vaccine.

Propane supply okay

OAK BROOK, Ill. - There will be adequate supplies of propane for farmers and other rural users next fall and winter, according to a forecast made by the National LF-Gas Association. In a recent radio interview about the supply situation for farm broadcasters Jack Capps, the Association's executive vice president, said that, "The propane industry is expected to be in good shape going into next winter with one provision, that no one tries to solve the natural gas shortage with propane".

Reviewing last winter's record breaking weather and the effects it has had on inventories, he said, "Fortunately we went into the winter with record inventories of 95 million barrels of propane that had been the result of several unusually warm winters. The best figures we have at this time estimate that the inventory was drawn down to approximately 48 million barrels. That is still a very handsome inventory figure which will be built up, as usual, during the summer."

Over 53 per cent of America's farmers use propane as a major source of energy around the farm. Its uses vary from crop drying, poultry brooding, pig farrowing, tobacco curing, barn heating to engine fuel for tractors, trucks and irrigation pump engines. It is a highly protable gas which makes it very versatile and specially suitable for farm use.

The country's 17.5 million propane customers were urged to fill up all available storage tanks during the summer before the onset of winter and the heavy fall "fill up" period, which can sometimes lead to delivery delays. As an example Capps pointed out that, "In the farm yards there is tremendous storage available and farmers should certainly plan to go into the winter with their tanks full". He also suggested that users should check with their local propane supplier whether their storage capacities are adequate for their needs.

'...I don't know if I'd have the courage to do it again'

Milk jugging provided the answers

By SALLY BAIR
Feature Writer

Being involved with the business of dairy farming is not unique in this area since most dairy wives are. But Janet Hess shares her type of involvement with just a small number of others. Her husband, J. Larry, and his brother John operate a jugging operation, Pine View Acres, located on the New Danville Pike, Lancaster, R6.

Going into the milk jugging business is a big step, but if you try something new it's an even bigger step. When Pine View Dairy opened in September, 1971 they were using the "plastic-pak" system of milk marketing which until then had not been seen in this area. As Janet reflects on the work and the changes they made she says with a smile, "As I look back now I don't know if I'd have the courage to do it again."

In 1971 Larry and Janet had reached the point where some changes needed to be made in their dairy farming operations. Mrs. Hess recalls, "Our barn was really old-fashioned. It had no feeding sytem, no manure removal system. We knew we had to change." She said they considered expanding and renovating and had even ordered a new silo as part of the plan when they discovered that the zoning laws would not permit structures of that size so close to the road. She sums it up, "We were really cramped for future expansion."

As they reviewed the available alternatives, Janet recalls, someone suggested they try a jugging operation. She said, "We knew that would be a big step, and that we couldn't do it by ourselves." To help make the decision, the Hesses visited other jugging operations already in existence, and then found that Larry's brother who had been living in California was willing to become a partner in the venture.

So they built a free stall barn and milking parlor, as well as a sales room.

Because their existing barn was so out-of-date, Janet said they didn't feel they were leaving behind a large investment. At the time of the change they had been milking 40 cows, and now in their jugging operation they milk about 145 cows. In addition to the two brothers, there is a herdsman to help with milking chores. Four part-time school girls and three women share sales room duties.

Another big decision at the time of the change was what type of processing to use to market the milk. Janet said they decided against glass bottles because of the need for extra storage space as well as a separate room for the bottle washer, plus the need to charge deposit for bottles. They chose the plastic-pak system, which features bags of milk and takes very little space.

"We sure had to sell the idea," Janet says. At first they gave demonstrations on the handling of these "bags" of milk and Janet said most customers have accepted them well. The only problem comes with occasional "leakers" she said, but that is minimal.

Two-year-old Christine Hess eyes her glass anxiously as it is being filled with milk which is produced, processed, and "bagged" at her parents' farm. Providing the treat is her mother, Janet Hess.

June is dairy month

Homestead Notes

June is dairy month

In addition to selling milk in the plastic bags, the Hesses do a large business in "bagged" fruit drinks, iced tea and orange juice. The store also sells convenience items, and in the Summer does a booming business in ice cream cones.

Janet said, "We really appreciated the help our banker gave us. He had seen jugging operations and knew it could work, and had the knowledge we needed."

Another source of encouragement to them as they got started was from their feed salesman, who had seen other operations work.

Mrs. David Hess, Larry and John's mother, takes an avid interest in the operation, and works in the store two days a week. When the decision was made to go to jugging, she said, "My husband and I were very well pleased that they wanted to stay on the farm. We were very much in favor of the jugging operation, and thought it was a good thing."

Janet worked in the sales room regularly until the birth of her second daughter two months ago. She said, "I enjoy being there. The customers seem really pleased. We get a lot of comments on the quality of our milk. The milk is produced, processed and goes out the door in a short time. We process three times a week so the milk is really fresh." She is anxious to return to work when the children are older.

Mable Hess agrees, "Our milk is definitely fresh. We get good comments, and I have people tell me, 'my children just won't drink the milk in school.'" She said other people tell her their children just can't get enough milk to drink.

Janet keeps all the records for the operation, including payroll and tax records. She says Pine View Acres processes about 4-5,000 gallons weekly. They make ice cream from a mix, once a week and sell about 275 gallons.

At the moment, the juggers are experiencing a common woe of dairymen at this time of the year - they have too much milk. As a June Dairy Month special, they have lowered their price by 10 cents a gallon and Janet thinks it has helped move more milk. "Ten cents a gallon is really worthwhile." Another promotion is a radio commercial sponsored by the Hesses and three other jugging operations to tell about a jug milk store and encourage people to stop in.

At Pine View Acres, it is evident that public relations is a great concern. They work with the public by having local school children tour their operation. Janet says they show the children everything including the cows and the processor. For demonstrations they run water through the plastic bags. She said they get interesting comments, including thank you notes and pictures of the children's visit. She said they feel it pays off because children talk with their parents and are liable to suggest a visit for an ice cream cone.

Everyone is pleased with the success of the operation, and the future looks bright. However, Janet states realistically, "The gas price has us worried a little bit. People won't be willing to drive too far for milk." She points out that they have customers from a wide area, including some from Lancaster City who have organized car pools to make the trip worthwhile. Mrs. Mable Hess recalls that they used to have customers from Paradise and Intercourse.

The elder Mrs. Hess, who works two days in the store, one day helping to make ice cream and one day at Central Market for S. Clyde Weaver, said, "I love to be a sales person. I wouldn't work like I do if I didn't enjoy it." She said she particularly enjoys getting into conversations with customers to learn what they're thinking. Of her experiences at the cash register, "People are very friendly. There are just so many nice and friendly people."

There is a fine mangement line to figure out how much milk is needed without having a surplus, and without running out of milk. Janet says they do run out occasionally, sometimes around closing time. She said it's embarrassing, and they are very apologetic when it happens. Occasionally they will process milk on an extra day just to make sure they don't run out.

Janet grew up on a farm at Centerville Manor, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Sangrey. While it was not a dairy farm, Janet says, "We sold vegetables at market so I knew what hard work was." When she and Larry married ten years ago she helped regularly with the milking, and still helps occasionally to give one of the others a break.

There are two small Hess children, Christine who will be three in September, and Wendy Jo, 2½ months. They are members of the New Danville Mennonite Church where Janet was bulletin editor last year. She is also a gardener and was enjoying a bumper strawberry crop at the time of this interview.

It was a difficult decision and a big change for the Hesses, but they are pleased with the growing acceptance of their dairy over the years and Janet speaks with justifiable pride when she says, "We offer freshness and quality in a product which is produced at home.

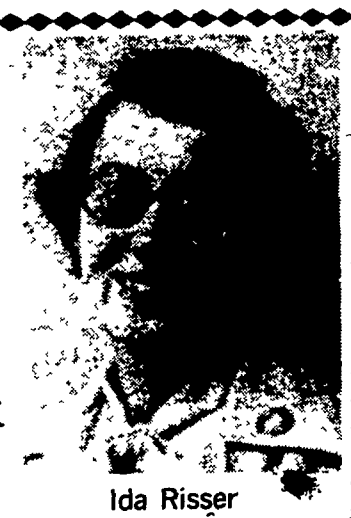
Ida's Notebook



Ida Risser

This has been a good strawberry season for us. We had the patch as a 4-H project and by this time is getting tired of picking them. We were delighted to pick the first red berry May 15 but with some 200 boxes later, I also be delighted to see the last berry.

This is the first year she showed at the 4-H Strawberry Round-up sponsored by the Lancaster Rotary Club. Everything is a learning experience and this was no exception. You see, we always pick our berries very ripe and deliver them to homes within a few hours of when they are picked. Our customers always rave about the sweetness of our nice berries. However, we learned at the Show that they should have been more firm. I suppose, since they are held several days or more in stores, they must be picked less ripe.

The boy who won first prize had his box auctioned off for $50.00. Cindy was glad to get $10 a box for her berries.

She says that she is tired of strawberries but when I make a big delicious strawberry pie, she always wants her share of it.

This year Allen bought a no-till corn planter and used it to put in corn after the first cutting of hay was baled.

It is difficult for me to accept the idea that he can drive through the alfalfa fields and plant, then spray and raise a corn crop without tilling the soil.

Guess, I'll have to wait and see it to believe it. It had better be a good stand though, considering the price of the machinery used to produce it.

Window shades can be decorative and useful

NEWARK, Del. - Windows have been the inspriation for decoration and design down through the centuries, points out Jean Cranston, Delaware Extension home economist whose specialty is home furnishings.

Painted window shades became popular in our country during the 18th Century, using landscape designs copied from drawing books. These were usually rural scenes showing a variety of farm chores against backgrounds of native architecture. or mountains with relics of castles and temples. Thus the artist's heritage from European forebears as well as American pioneers was reflected.

By the middle of the 19th Century, bordered shades replaced all-over designs, says Ms. Cranston. Some of these also featured medallion centers of scenic or floral motifs.

Window shades were first mass produced during the Victorian era.

Today's shades are not only attractive but practical. They can provide a handsome decorative touch to your room, while cutting down heat loss in winter and shutting out the hot sun in summer. Research studies show that you can conserve energy by using roller shades, says the home economist.

Fabrics vary widely in texture, from sheer to translucent to opaque. Colors and patterns are almost unlimited.

If your decor is formal, choose shades of shantung or moire, real or simulated, suggests Ms. Cranston. An informal look can be achieved with boucle or homespun.

If you want window shades to match draperies or wallpaper, you can have them laminated with the same fabric or paper. There are also shades that are color-coordinated with paint.

Some shades are available with a coating on the back to deflect light and heat. Others are treated with a soil-resistant finish such as Scotchguard, or a Sanitized finish to resist mildew. Vinyl or vinyl-coated shades are easy to clean with a damp sponge.

The type of window and the desired decorating effect will determine the shade and the mounting you choose, says the home economist.

Brackets are available to pull window shades down from the back of the roller, or from the front. There are also ceiling brackets so that a shade can give extra height to a window D brackets allow you to u shades at the same w one translucent and th a room-darkening o

Plant lovers' corner

Proper care of roses critical now

Roses are perhaps the all-time favorite of the cut flowers grown in the home garden. However, the way you cut roses can affect the plant's performance - especially in the next few weeks.

Many gardeners cut blooms with stems so long they rob the rose of its foliage, according to University of Delaware Extension horticulturist Dr. Charles Dunham. Since the foliage manufactures the plant's food material, this reduces the growth and subsequent flower yields of the plants.

During the first season of blooms or with weak plants, Dunham says to cut flowers with a very short stem to allow plants to develop into large bushes. Even when plants are well established, don't cut stems any longer than actually needed. Leave at lease two leaves between the cut and the main stem.

Hybrid tea roses usually have three leaflets directly below the flower and three leaves with five leaflets. If the stem is weak, make the cut above the topmost five leaflets. If the stem is as thick as a pencil, you can make the cut so as to leave two or three fine leaflet leaves on the stem.

When the June flush of flowers is past, however, don't neglect your roses. With good care, they will bloom until fall. Keep up the weekly spray schedule all summer and water during dry periods. According to Dunham, roses are best watered with a soaker that does not wet the foliage. Apply enough water to soak down around the roots with each application.

If the last time you applied fertilizer to your roses was early spring. it is time for a second application. There are many specialty rose fertilizers available, says Dunham, but lacking one of these, apply about one-half cup of 5-10-5 garden fertilizer to each plant. Follow with a good watering to carry the fertilizer down to the plant roots. You may also need to add more mulch to your rose bed at this time. Remember that it takes two to three inches of mulch to discourage most weeds.

If roses in the garden need replacing, potted roses are still available at most garden centers and can be planted any time of year.

Ground Covers For Garden Banks

Banks are a part of the landscape on many home properties, and they can be an asset or a liability, depending on how you handle them, says University of Delaware Extension horticulturist Dr. Charles Dunham.

Steep banks are difficult to mow when covered with grass, and some type of ground cover is often used that doesn't have to be cut. The choice depends on the degree of formality required and the exposure.

In the shade pachysandra, vinca and English ivy are excellent choices with good year-round appearance. For less refined areas, daylilies or Japanese honeysuckle will do well.

In the sun the low creeping junipers are one of the best ground covers, says Dunham. The Blue Rug juniper is a very low, flat-growing variety. The Waukegan juniper is a little taller (12 to 15 inches) and the Sargent juniper will reach 24 to 30 inches. Various junipers can be mixed in a planting to provide more contrast.

Crown vetch is one of the most vigorous covers for rough banks. It will make a solid cover but should not be used in confined areas because of its rank growth habit. Other spreading shrubs like dwarf forsythia, euonymous and coral berry could also be used in these rougher locations.

There are many plants that are well suited for small bank areas. Winter jasmine and many of the spreading cotoneasters are good in either sun or light shade and provide color in season with their flowers and fruits. Some of the trailing roses can be used on sunny slopes. The Memorial rose makes an especially good ground cover. It has glossy foliage and small white flowers.

When planting a bank there's always the problem of establishing the plants and at the same time preventing erosion until they've had a change to spread. Heavy mulching with straw is one of the best ways to handle this difficulty, notes the horticulturist.

More elaborate ways to treat banks include turning them into dry walls or rock gardens.

A dry retaining wall cut into a steep bank and planted to rock plants can be a most effective addition to a dull landscape. Where the slope is more gradual, stones may be dug into the bank in pleasing arrangement and then planted. This will provide an excellent setting for a great variety of plant material. The rocks themselves provide protection against weeds and the planting pocket will show off many small bulbs and rock plants which would be lost in a regular garden.

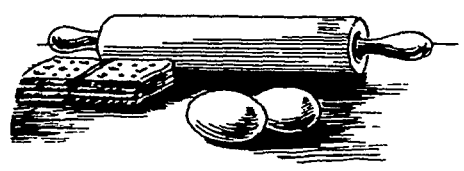
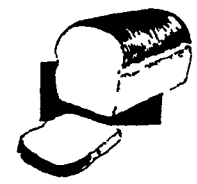
Home on The Range





The whole month of June is Dairy Month, so for this week's Home on the Range, we have a variety of recipes, each of which contains a dairy product. The recipes vary from main dishes to salads to desserts, and will add interest to your cooking while helping the dairy industry promote its products. You'll find several recipes which will help you use those last few quarts of strawberries and you may be surprised to find that great American favorite - pizza. Pizza uses lots of cheese, so qualifies as a good dairy promoter. Don't forget to check your grocer's dairy case to take advantage of Dairy Month specials.

Fiddlers to celebrate soon

On Sunday, June 26, the Deer Creek Fiddlers will hold their 15th Fiddlers Convention. Old Timey and Bluegrass musicians will gather to compete for band prizes, fiddle prizes, and awards in six other categories: banjo, bass, mandolin, guitar, vocal, and special. Everyone is welcome. Pets and alcohol are not allowed. Music starts at 2:00 p.m. with the preliminary round which lasts till 7:00. The finals start around 8 p.m. and continue under the light of the full moon until 10:00.

In the past about a dozen bands have shown up at each convention, coming from all over the East Coast. Besides traditional instruments, musicians bring musical saws, jugs, bagpipes, and other interesting acoustical paraphenalia.

In this sixth season of the Deer Creek Fiddlers Convention there will be a special treat. The Cub Hill Cloggers from the Baltimore-Annapolis area will stomp and shuffle through dance routines like those they've performed at the Baltimore City Fair. Their dance rhythm actually needs no music, but is accompanied by the natural foot stomping music of a bluegrass band. The cloggers put on a whirling, swirling show that's hard to beat, says publicity chairman David Greene.

To find the convention grounds, in northern Harford County, Md. on Channell Road, use the following guide:

From York, Pa., go south on I-83 to Pennsylvania exit 1. Turn to the left and go east on Route 24 into Norrisville. Take Maryland Route 23 east and south out of Norrisville. After about one mile, turn left (east) onto Route 136 which is called Harkins Road. Go east about one mile. Turn left onto Carea Road. Go north about one mile. Turn right onto Channell Road. Go east about one mile into a valley and across a small stream. Turn right immediately after crosssing the stream, putting the church which is under construction on your left. With that last right turn, you entered the convention grounds.

My Thoughts

And welcome to them

By JOANNE SPAHR
Associate Editor

Just last month, I had the opportunity to "shoot" my first wedding. Shooting a wedding is nothing like "shooting the loop", which is what I did in high school on weekends with my dad's car. No, shooting a wedding is simply taking the pictures.

I have to admit, though, I was a little nervous for this undertaking. For, while I do photography as part of my job, the thought of shooting something as important as a wedding rattled me a little. As a result, I ended up with semi-nightmares on the subject. One of them went like this:

xxx

"So," she began, as she seated herself prim and properly on the big, soft-cushioned sofa. "Have you done this sort of thing before?"

She flashed a broad, friendly smile as she crossed her legs at the ankles, folded her hands, and waited for me to say yes.

"No, I haven't," I beamed right back at her, nodding my head for emphasis and looking straight in her eyes.

The corners of her mouth instantly drooped about ¼ of an inch and her eyebrows crawled toward each other to form a slight scowl.

"Ugh," she coughed, nervously clutching her throat, "somehow I got the impression that you were a photographer." An SOS rang out loud and clear as her voice wavered with uncertainty and her eyes pled for a reassuring answer from me.

"Yes, I am," I jumped in immediately, throwing her the life jacket she so desperately needed. "I work for a newspaper and take my own shots."

Relief registered on her face, and, she had just begun to smile again when I had the stupidity to rip the lifesavor right out of her hands and send her back to the gloomy depths.

"Mostly, I take pictures of cows, pigs, horses, chickens, and that sort of thing, but I'm sure there's not much difference between that and a wedding," I blotched.

As I looked on, I saw the blood drain right from her face until it matched the color of the wedding gown on her bridal bedecked daughter, who had just rustled into the room and sat down beside her.

They shared in a brief moment of heart failure as the mother's left hand inched its way under the cushions to grasp the outstretched hand of the bride.

"Really," I ever-so-swavely injected, "if I can get pictures of those cantankerous sows in the mud at the fairs, I can get anything." I was grinning a nervous grin so wide it turned into a grimace.

When they winced in unison, I realized I was doing no good. Looking around at my camera bag, I said the first thing to come to my mind which I could use to get out of the room.

"Think I'll go study my camera manual," I murmured.

I didn't even turn around when I heard the groans.

DON't SPOIL THE POT

The pot luck dinner has become an American tradition. It's a great way to get the gang together for an inexpensive dinner party. It's a great opportunity to experience new foods.

If not carefully planned, though, your next pot luck dinner could turn into a disaster. Too many cooks often do spoil the pot. Sometimes the result is food poisoning. You can prevent possible food poisoning at the next pot luck dinner you host or attend by following these tips:

The key to safe pot luck dinners is careful planning–making sure that hot foods stay hot and cold foods stay cold. Bacteria and germs which cause food-borne illness grow rapidly at temperatures between 40 degrees or higher–safe from harm. So when your friends bring their favorite dishes to your home for dinner, immediately store them at the proper temperatures until dinner is served.

When your guests ask what they can bring to the party, consider how far they live from your home. If they live more than a 20 minute drive from the party, have them bring a "safe at any temperature" dish such as a fresh vegetable salad, bread or dessert. Save the hot and cold dishes for neighbors and friends who live closer to your home. Not only will it be easier for your friends, but it will be safer, too.

If, on the other hand, you are the "friend" – be a courteous guest. When invited to a pot luck dinner, allow yourself enough time to prepare your dish and get to the party on time. While other guests wait for you to arrive, the glazed chicken and tuna salad supreme may be approaching the danger zone for food safety. A 30 to 40 minute wait is a "dream come true" for mischievous germs.

When you take your favorite dish to a pot luck dinner, you'll want to be sure that it has that special "personal" touch. To please your friends, you will want to put extra care into preparing whatever you bring–maybe add a few tasty garnishes on the dessert or a fancy sauce for the casserole. It's fun to be creative with what you prepare, but it's more important to handle the ingredients properly. Cleanliness is essential to food safety. Always, wash your hands carefully with soap and water before handling food. Wear rubber gloves if you have a cut or infection on your hands. Make sure all utensils, cutting boards and counter surfaces are washed thoroughly with hot, soapy water before and after using them.

Clean the table immediately after everyone has finished eating. As everyone finishes eating and starts to mingle or play games, germs may grow rapidly to dangerous levels. So, don't leave food on the buffet table. Quickly rinse any empty dishes and set them aside. It only takes a few minutes to cover the leftover food and place it in the refrigerator–valuable minutes. If there is not enough room in the refirgerator for all of the casserole dishes, serving platters, etc., save on space by wrapping what you can in aluminum foil. Also, have some disposable containers on hand. To save room, leftovers can be refrigerated in these containers and sent home when the guests leave.

The effects of food poisoning are often confused with those of the flu–headache, cramps, diarrhea and vomiting. That's no way for anyone to remember an enjoyable evening! With these tips in mind you can have a safe pot luck dinner and avoid a case of food poisoning.

Lamb club visits PSU

YORK - The York Co. 4-H Lamb Club's June meeting was held at the farm of Steward Ebersole. Members were asked to bring their blocking stands and tools. Each new member was given a sheep from the Ebersole farm to work on. The older members all had someone to help, and show the techniques of blocking and grooming sheep. Some of the older members then held a showmanship contest to show the new members what is expected of them when showing sheep. The business meeting was then held.

On June 4, the Lamb Club took a trip to Penn State University for the Sheep Field Day. In the morning there was a choice of which workshops you wanted to go to. Among the choices were orphan lambs, lamb cookery, results of the Finsheep cross, and an electric fence demonstration. Fricasse of lamb was served for lunch. In the afternoon there was a spinning and dying wool workshop. A ram sale was then held. Afterwards the club had a brief tour of the campus, and ice cream from the creamery.

June is dairy month

On being a farm wife

—And other hazards

By JOYCE BUPP

Well, here it is, Father's Day. No, that will not mean a new tie, dear. You rarely wear them anyway, since the leisure suits have come out. But speaking of leisure suits, do you remember the leisure jacket I made you for Father's Day about three years ago?

It was a white double knit, trimmed with navy top-stitching. I figured it'd be a nice change from the usual gift of a new wrench or socket set for the shop. Dress you up and all that.

You wore it for the first time to a dairy cooperative meeting. And it looked so nice. When we left to come home, you took it off and carefully laid it over the seat of the car for the drive back.

We stopped at your parents' home to pick up Patty and Richard. The sheep were out, remember? So all of us ran up and down the dirt road, putting the flock back inside the fence. And the kids had their sneakers on; and the road had just been given a new coating of tar to keep down the dust; and somehow the jacket slipped off the front seat and fell onto the floor of the back seat; and of course the kids never looked when they crawled back into the car to go home.

Halfway there, I glanced over the seat onto the back floor and spotted the white knit jacket, now doing double duty as a floor mat for two pairs of tar-coated sneakers.

Horrified. Speechless. Frustrated. Distraught. Furious. Sick. Roll them all together and you might get an emotion close to how I felt.

After about, a week when I could look the jacket in the face again, I took gasoline, a clean rag and applied them with a dose of elbow grease. Hey, how about this. It's coming off!

Like most victories, this one was short-lived. The gasoline left stains just as bad as the tar had been. Spot remover failed. Grease remover failed. Bleach failed. I retreated from the battle temporarily.

Then one day, I spotted a box of blue dye on the shelf. Well, why not? The double knit turned a dull, washed out blue-gray color. So did the stains, still remaining highly visible. The jacket was pitched in a pile of mending things to be carefully ignored.

Months later, I ran across the beastly garment. In a renewed burst of determination, I mounted one last at tack. Dumping about a cup of chlorine bleach in very ho water again, I decided to remove the disgusting dye an see if another color might work better. Maybe th material would even come out in shreds and could b exiled to the rag bag without a guilty conscience.

When that jacket came out of the washing machine, was spotless. What an unbelieveable surprise to find looking brand-new again! I danced a jig as I hung it bac in the closet.

Now, what size wrench did you say you needed thi year?

AFBF favors House ag bill

NAPA, Calif. - The American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF) recently urged Congress to include a purchase requirement in the final version of pending food stamp legislation. The Senate version of the Farm Bill contains provisions that would eliminate the purchase requirement.

The House Agriculture Committee reported a Farm Bill without a food stamp provision but is expected to add food stamp legislation before the full House acts.

"Farm Bureau also objects to the higher support levels reported out in the Sen version of a proposed n Farm Bill," Allan Gra AFBF president, said "T House bill is more in l with Farm Bureau policy loan levels and tar prices."

The AFBF Board Directors held its Ju meeting here last week

Eastern reorganizes leadership

SYRACUSE, N.Y. - Eastern Milk Producers, the nation's third largest dairy cooperative, held its annual reorganizational meeting at its headquarters here on June 9 at which time a new slate of officers was elected for 1977-78.

Arden Tewksbury of Meshoppen, Pa. was re-elected to a third term as president of the 7500 dairy farmer member organization. Newly elected officers were Robert K. Hill, Jr., Elbridge, N.Y., vice president; Clyde Wilson, Rushville, Pa., secretary and Max Lonstein, New Berlin, N.Y., treasurer.

Stanley Korona, Amsterdam, N.Y. and Harold Rotz, Waynesboro, Pa. joined Tewksbury, Hill and Lonstein to form the Co-op's executive committee. All of the above officers and committee members will serve in their elected positions for one year.

Earlier, two new members were seated on Eastern's Board of Directors. Franklin G. Wagner, Hummelstown, Pa. and William S. Johnson, Goshen, N.Y. replaced Alfred Wanner, Narvon, Pa. and Howard Merrill, Walton, N.Y. respectively. Both Wanner and Merrill retired from the Board after having served their allowable number of years in that position.

Merrill had been elected to numerous offices during his many years of dedicated service to the cooperative membership including several terms as president, secretary and treasurer, as well as chairman of standing committees. Wanner had served as treasurer of the organization for the past two years and had distinguished himself by representing the members in his district in other capacities during his years as a director.

Residues found

NEW YORK, N.Y. - The percentage of illegal chemical residues in meat and poultry increased slightly for the third quarter in a row, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA).

A total of 114 residue violations were found among the 4,455 meat and poultry samples analyzed by USDA's Food Safety and Quality Service (FSQS) during the first quarter (January-March) of 1977. This equals a violation rate of 2.5 per cent.

Of the first quarter's total 114 violations, FSQS found 103 in red meat and 11 in poultry. This adds up to 2.8 and 1.1 per cent violation rates, respectively. The major violation was sulfa drug residues in swine.

What creates sand? The ongoing battle between the sea and land. Waves cutting inexorably into a rock face can undermine and cause it to collapse, then break down the rubble into pebbles, and the pebbles into sand. It has been estimated that the sea may take several hundred years to reduce a boulder one foot in diameter to sand.

Donna Capp is Dauphin County dairy princess

By DIETER KRIEG

HARRISBURG - The most logical place to promote milk is in elementary schools, says Donna Capp, Dauphin County's dairy princess for 1977-78. "Little kids haven't made up their minds yet about milk," she explained. "I'd like to go the elementary schools and give puppet shows which illustrate the nutritive qualities of milk."

Miss Capp, 16, was crowned last week during a pageant which was held at the Harrisburg East Mall. (See related story elsewhere in this issue). She vied for the title along with three other Dauphin County girls - Theresa Watts, 18, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Watts, Hummelstown R2; Cathy Winfindale, 16, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Winfindale, Hummelstown; and June Long, 17, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Long, Hershey R1. Miss Capp is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Capp, Hershey R1.

A member of the Lower Dauphin FFA Chapter, the new dairy princess helps with many of the farming chores at home and has ambitions for a veterinary medicine career. Asked whether she'd like to continue living on a farm after marriage, the petite princess replied with a definite yes.

The new dairy princess is five foot, two inches tall, has blue eyes, and brown hair.

Named runner-up in last week's contest, which drew a sizable crowd in the capital city shopping complex, was Cathy Winfindale, a member of the field hockey team at Lower Dauphin High School. Miss Winfindale entered the contest because she is "really interested in promoting milk" and wants to do her best to get the message to school children and others. She has blue eyes, light brown hair, and is five feet four inches tall.

June Long, a vivacious brunette with hazel eyes, comes from a 65-cow Holstein dairy farm where she helps with barn and field chores. Like Miss Capp, she believes the elementary school is the best place to promote milk and dairy products. "I love ice cream," she announced enthusiastically, hinting that a realistic dairy promotion program must consider that not everyone will drink milk and like it. An active member of her church youth group and 4-H club, Miss Long is convinced she'd like to live on a farm after marriage.

Theresa Watts pursued general academic studies at Lower Dauphin High School and will try to combine a part-time job with work at home now that she has graduated. She was president of the Spanish Club and a member of the FHA. Standing five feet, nine inches tall, Miss Watts has blue eyes and auburn hair. She helps at home with her parents' 41-head Guernsey herd.

The moment of glory came for Donna Capp when master of ceremonies, Mac McCauley of WCMB Radio announced her name. Donna Brandt, the 1976-77 Dauphin County dairy princess, presented the girl with the tiara and sash. Also on hand for the ceremony was Pennsylvania's dairy princess, Peggy Staub of Cumberland County.

Dauphin County's dairy story taken to shoppers

By DIETER KRIEG

ARRISBURG - Dauphin ty dairymen and their ies put together their st promotional effort last week when they ght a bit of the farm to Harrisburg East Mall, hen capped the event by ning 16-year old Donna Capp as their 1977 dairy ess ousands of shoppers attracted to the ys during the course of promotional activities, Friday evening's events ng the most attention. nly was the princess to owned then, it was also oment of truth for such taries as Harrisburg's or Harold Swenson and nsylvania Dairy ess Peggy Staub. Both involved in milking sts. Aside from that, was also a milk ing contest.

e dairy activities were advertised on the huge at the entrance to the ping complex, which is ted southeast of the state's capital. Master of ceremonies was Mac McCauley of WCMB radio.

In the first of two milking contests, Mayor Swenson was pitted against Commissioner Earl Hoffman. A large crowd encircled the contest, and necks craned to get a glimpse of the politicians' milking abilities. When it was all over, Mayor Swenson was declared the winner by a narrow margin.

Peggy Staub took on the president of the Dauphin County Holstein Club in the second contest, and lost to the veteran dairyman after a valiant try.

Afterwards, the two cows - both of them brought in especially for the occasion by dairyman Tom Williams - still had plenty of milk in them. So the contests went on, with spectators providing the competition and fun. Anyone who wanted to give hand milking a try, was allowed to do so. Radio personality McCauley gave a squirt-by-squirt account of the action.

The dairy promotion activities at the Harrisburg East Mall last week were a real crowd stopper.

The lighter moments of fun turned into suspense when the four dairy princess contestants were introduced. They were Donna Capp, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Capp, Hershey R1; June Long, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Long, Hershey R1; Theresa Watts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Watts, Hummelstown R2; and Cathy Winfindale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Winfindale, Hummelstown R2. The four contestants were accompanied on stage by Peggy Staub and the 1976 Dauphin County Dairy Princess, Donna Brandt.

After having been interviewed by the judges, the four dairy princess contestants were presented to the audience. McCauley spoke with each one briefly, then asked them questions

Hearing set for East Petersburg

HARRISBURG - The Susquehanna River Basin Commission will hold a public hearing as part of its review of the East Petersburg Borough Authority's (East Petersburg, Pa.) ground-water development. The hearing will be held immediately following the Commission's July 14, 1977, meeting which is scheduled to begin at 1:00 p.m. in the Penn Harris Motor Inn, U.S. Routes 11 & 15 in Camp Hill. The hearing is being held to receive pertinent testimony from the Authority and interested parties concerning the Authority's development and its potential impact on the water and related resources of the basin.

The East Petersburg Borough Authority water supply system serves approximately 3,500 persons in the Borough of East Petersburg.

The principal areas of interest upon which the Commission is basing its review of the project are demand projections; availability of enough water to satisfy future needs; and efficient utilization of available water supplies.

The application documents filed by the project sponsor are available for public inspection during regular business hours at the office of the Susquehanna River Basin Commission, 5012 Lenker Street, Mechanicsburg, Pennsylvania 17055. The offices are open to the public from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Persons wishing to participate in the hearing may present oral and-or written testimony. Those wishing to testify in person are requested to contact the Secretary to the Commission, in writing, prior to the hearing.

PennAg protests proposed antibiotic ban

EPHRATA – PennAg has expressed its opposition to FDA Commissioner Donald Kennedy's announced intention, after a few days on the job, of eliminating all low-level antibiotics in feeds, except on the prescription of a veterinarian. The association charged that Kennedy acknowledged the considerable economic advantage to their use, acknowledged no known case of illness or disease in the 25 plus years of use, admitted there would be problems in getting veterinarians enough to take care of increased disease incidence, but opted instead for a theoretical public health issue and completely disregarded all of the scientific studies and recommendations by his peers.

The association statements indicated that until some public health issue - besides hysteria - documented, the overridi economic benefits should r be discarded.

which were picked at random.

June Long responded to her question - on the future of the family dairy farm - that it would continue to prosper so long as the number of farms in the country wouldn't continue to dwindle. A trend to fewer and fewer farms, she figures, would work against the family farm concept.

Theresa Watts was questioned on her ideas for promoting milk to senior citizens. She said she'd take dairy products to them and explain the nutritive values of each in a manner which would "cheer them up."

"Women on the farm are already liberated," declared Donna Kay, in reference to the Equal Rights Amendment. She was asked about the woman's role on a dairy farm and noted that her mother is very active on the farm. Her activities on the farm range from milking the family's 100 Holsteins to driving the tractor in the field.

The advantages of living on a dairy farm were cited by Cathy Winfindale. The biggest advantage, she said, was the sense of togetherness a family experiences on the farm. All members live and work together and share in the responsibilities and joys.

The trio of judges - two women and a man - deliberated for about half an hour. When it was all over, Miss Capp was declared Dauphin County Dairy Princess for 1977.

By observing how a tree bark is marked, you can often tell what kind of animal has been chewing. Bears, for example, strip the bark from trees, leaving claw and tooth marks on the tree. Deer use the bark of young trees for emergency food, tearing it off with upward movements of their teeth. Porcupines gnaw large patches of bark, leaving scares that have smooth edges and many small tooth marks. And cougars use trees to sharpen their claws, leaving scratches that may signal their presence to other cougars in the neighborhood.

Good taste keeps asparagus growing

By selling asparagus as a fresh market item, growers eliminate processing and apckaging costs and give the consumer a lower-priced better-tasting product.

The first year after asparagus roots are planted, the stalks can be harvested for only a week because the plant is not yet well established. They are cut about a month the follow year, but it's not until third year that aspara

NEWARK, Del. - Asparagus is a labor-intensive, low-yielding crop with a disease problem which is beginning to limit production in this area. In fact, farmers would've stopped growing it altogether before now if the stuff just didn't tast so darn good.

"Asparagus is a costly crop to produce and the net return per acre is not enough to make up for it," says Joe Jackewicz, a farmer in Rising Sun who harvested 200 acres of the crop this year but has no plans to increase production. "As long as we can find other crops to give us more return per acre, why fool with asparagus?"

There was a time when canneries dotted the countryside of Kent and Sussex counties and, in general, agriculture in Delaware meant truck farming. Snap beans, asparagus, tomatoes, lima beans and peas were the mainstay of most Delaware farms and labor was a plentiful commodity.

For the most part, the canneries are gone now and the labor-intensive vegetable production has given way to highly-mechanized field corn, soybean and potato production. Of the few vegetable crops still grown on the peninsula, asparagus remains, probably only because a viable marketing alternative was found.

"By selling to the fresh market instead of the processors, we eliminate the middleman and save on processing and packaging," says Carlton Fifer, who grows 110 acres of asparagus on his farm near Wyoming, Del. "So we can sell to the consumer for half the price and get better returns for ourselves."

A number of factors contribute to the high retail cost of asparagus but time of production is perhaps the major one.

If you depend upon your milk check for a living, who's minding your milk?

The least expensive, one-shot insurance you can get is the Sentinel — the 10-inch recorder which charts temperature of your milk-cooling or holding tank. Here's what it provides:

- Permanent proof that proper temperature was maintained.
- Record of cooling equipment effic ncy.
- Cleaning temperature recording on the same chart.

The Sentinel is also available with provision for actuating an alarm or warning light if pre-set temperature is exceeded.

s can be cut for the full months harvest season. That's three years before rmer can make any y out of his asparagus " says Dr. Raymond C. h, chairman of the Department of Agricultural Economics at the University of Delaware. "During that time, not only is his land tied up but he's putting out the cost of production with no return."

There is some consolation in the fact that an asparagus bed will produce up to 15 years. But then again, if the bed becomes diseased or yields drop, the farmer can't really afford to dig it up with the investment he has at stake.

Asparagus "makes its own plant food," according to Jackewicz. When the farmers quit cutting - usually the first week or two in June - the plants are allowed to grow out until the next year, producing a fern which resembles the delicate asparagus fern house-plant but which grows up to six feet tall.

The fern growth allows the plant to store nutrients in its massive root system and when it is cut in the spring, the buds on the roots know that it's time to grow. An asparagus spear ideally should be four and a half to seven and a half inches long when harvested. Understandably, this means going over the bed many times to catch all the spears at the proper time.

"With the right weather combination, a given area of asparagus should be harvested once every 24 hours," says Jackewicz. "Sometimes six hours could make the difference of losing that day's cutting."

At the most, one man can cut about three acres of asparagus a day. Though the crop "does not lend itself well to mechanization," according to Smith, there are asparagus harvesters on the market.

"Mostly, these are modified mowers which cut the field all at once," says Fifer. "This may be alright for cannery vegetables, but you lose the selectivity for fresh market. Besides, the machines are quite expensive and seem to break down often. The really big growers out West in California and Washington can afford to use them but for our small acreage in Delaware, they're simply not practical."

Labor is a serious problem in the asparagus business. The Kent county growers often use crews from Jamaica, Puerto Rico and Mexico to do the spring cutting. But they have no guarantees on the quality of the work or, for that matter, that the workers will stay throughout the season. But, "to satisfy the fresh market, we have to hand harvest," says Jackewicz.

"Unless," he continues, "they come up with the means to mechanically harvest selective spears, I see no reason to plant any more asparagus."

Indeed, Delaware acreage has already dropped from more than 3000 acres in 1975 to less than a thousand this year. There are only some 10 growers left in the state and even the larger ones have no plans to increase production.

Another factor contributing to the decline of asparagus production is a soil-borne fungus disease called fusarium wilt which invades the roots and vascular tissues of the plant, wilting the ferns and zapping yields.

Because of this disease, New Jersey - formerly the nation's leading asparagus producer - has cut acreage to almost nothing. Scientists at Rutgers University are now working to perfect disease-resistant varieties in hopes of reviving the industry but for now, asparagus production in New Jersey is almost at a standstill.

"We have some instance of fusarium wilt in Delaware," says Dr. Robert Carroll, extension plant pathologist at the University of Delaware, "but it isn't widespread at this time. It's a disease more likely to be found in old beds - in places where people with land limitations have planted the same fields year after year."

Carroll doesn't feel fusarium wilt has seriously affected yields in Delaware. In fact, he's somewhat optimistic about asparagus production here. With retail supermarket prices as high as they are, he sees the fresh market deal as beneficial to consumers both in lower cost and better taste. And, surely the higher returns through the elimination of the middleman are an incentive to the producer.

Fifer and Jackewicz don't exactly share Carroll's optimism about the future of the asparagus crop in Delaware. But, though both farmers have the bulk of their acreage planted in other crops, they haven't come near digging up their asparagus beds. Though they still sell a small percentage of their harvest to the processing plants, both have begun selling more and more of their crops "straight out the door," as a fresh market item.

Asparagus may yet cross the line from luxury time to delicacy. But as long as there are producers willing to fight the labor problems and production costs, it escapes the fate facetiously predicted by one of the growers - that of winding up on a shelf in the museum rather than on our dinner plates.

Though there are machines to harvest asparagus, produce going for fresh market should ideally be hand cut.

York pork barbecue feeds more than 1000

By JOYCE BUPP
York County Reporter

THOMASVILLE, Pa. - For tenth consecutive year, rk producers in York unty fired up the charcoal s and filled the grills with pounds of thick juicy rk slices to feed hungry sters.

Flicker's Grove park is the e of the annual feed, held ne 11. Over a thousand rk lovers wound their way rough the long line to eat r fill of the fresh ham nks

"Heavy seasonings are for il' meat," believes Tony obrosky, assistant county tension agent who helps stermind the aromatic oking procedure. "This rk is absolutely pure meat, pared with no salt, no per, no anything!"

"Spices and sauces for t dishes originated in the diterannean area," plains Dobrosky, a estock specialist. "The at could not be rigerated or kept cold for length of time, so ventive cooks perimented with sonings to mask off-rors that developed."

"If you want your meat smothered in seasonings, you might as well take a piece of plastic, cover it with steak sauce and eat that," laughed the pure meat promotor.

Members of the Pork Association use fresh, boneless, rolled ham that has been solidly frozen. They saw the frozen rolls into three-quarter slices and place the unthawed slices over the cooking pit. Red-hot coals are raked to the sides of the area, providing heat but not flaring up to burn the meat when fat drops from the heating meat. Time from frozen pork slab to tender succulent finished product takes only 30 minutes.

The barbecue is staged by the York County Pork Producers as one way of acquainting the public with the delicious taste of wholesome fresh pork, as well as serving as a fund raising event for the group. Promotional activities on the value of pork have been on the upswing with growing participation in advertising checkoff programs.

"Producers can contribute a dime per head collected at the market," indicates Ron Trostle, Red Lion R2, a director in the association. "But it's not mandatory, only voluntary, and those wishing to contribute to the promotional funds can request their check-off returned."

In addition to cooperating with nationwide promotional efforts, the York County association boosts youth involvement in the pork industry.

"We sponsor the 4-H and FFA displays on pork at the York Fair," emphasizes York County Pork Producers President, Roger Bankert, Hanover R3. "Youth participants can go on the state and national recognition, as well, back by the promotional efforts."

Carolyn Rutter, Dover R2, heads up the local groups efforts to tell the public about the merits of pork.

"The Association will again be sponsoring a Pork King Cookout Contest during York Fair week," she has announced. "There will be cash awards to all participants." Entry forms for the competition are available from Mrs. Rutter, Association officers and the county extension office.

Treated straw can feed animals

NIVERSITY PARK - w treated with sodium roxide and supplemented n urea nitrogen can be d successfully in feeding ttle and sheep, periments at The nnsylvania State iversity have found.

he results were reported ently at University Park. ating straw with an alkali h as sodium hydroxide aks the chemical bond ween cellulose and lignin, king the cellulose estible, according to g Suk Park, graduate istant in animal science. ed a ration of 50 per cent ated straw and urea plement, lambs showed siderably more weight n per day than lambs fed other ration containing straw. Weight grains of these animals, averaging one-half pound per day, were exceeded only by lambs fed a standard ration of grain mixture and alfalfa hay. When the animals were fed a ration containing 75 per cent treated straw, they still gained one-third of a pound per day.

Laboratory analysis showed that 86 per cent of the cellulose in alkali-treated straw was digestible - compared with only 41 per cent of the cellulose in untreated straw. Protein synthesis from non-protein nitrogen in the animal's rumen or first stomach was also increased by the alkali treatment.

Park said large worldwide quantities of straw, a by-product of grain production, could be important in nutrition of cud-chewing animals if digestibility and palatability can be improved as shown at Penn State. A native of Korea, Park hopes to apply his findings to animal feeding projects in his home country.

He indicated alkali-treated straw is used in most European countries. In Denmark and England, the treated straw is stored in silos or is made into cubes or briquettes. Some companies process the treated straw into cubes or briquettes at the rate of four tons per hour. The experiments at Penn State used 35 wether lambs for 42 days in the midsummer of 1976. The lambs were divided into groups of seven by weight.

How much damage is done annually to crops in this nation by blackbirds is not possible to tell, but in the state of Tennessee alone, it is estimated that last year, $23.5 million damage was done.

Charolais conference ready

HOUSTON, Tex. - Cow efficiency, considered from management, fertility, reproduction and performance influences, will be the over-riding theme of the Eighth Annual Junior Leadership Conference sponsored by American-International Junior Charolais Foundation, Inc., on the campus of Ohio State University, Columbus, June 23-25.

The conference will immediately follow the Second Annual National Junior Charolais Heifer show June 23 at Ohio Exposition Center in Columbus. An estimated 200 junior members and exhibitors are expected to attend either or both events, states Dr. J. W. Gossett, executive vice president of American-International Charolais Assn., parent group to the junior organization.

GO Zero Concord FROM TEAT TO TANK!

NEW MODEL 70 S
Zero Concord
TWIN VACUUM PIPELINE
MILKING SYSTEM
WITH COW MONITOR
It's a combination of a new, revolutionary pipeline milking machine and the ZERO Completely-Automated Vacuum Bulk Milk Cooler.

The ZERO CONCORD is the only system that provides stable milking vacuum at the teat end — in parlor or stanchion barn — with a low or high, short or long, pipeline — and without injecting air into the milker units to move the milk. Only with stable vacuum and no air injection can you hope to reduce leucocyte counts up to 65% — increase milk production as much as 20% — and prevent off-flavor and rancid milk.

The safe, stable vacuum is made possible by a patented, scientific principle TWIN-VACUUM whereby one vacuum milks the cows, and a different vacuum moves the milk through a separate pipeline into the bulk tank. In addition — thanks to ZERO's patented SPATTER SPRAY Automatic Washer and new, improved, high-capacity, transparent milker unit — you have built-in, "push button" visible self cleaning and sanitizing of the entire system — without disassembling. And there are many other advantages.

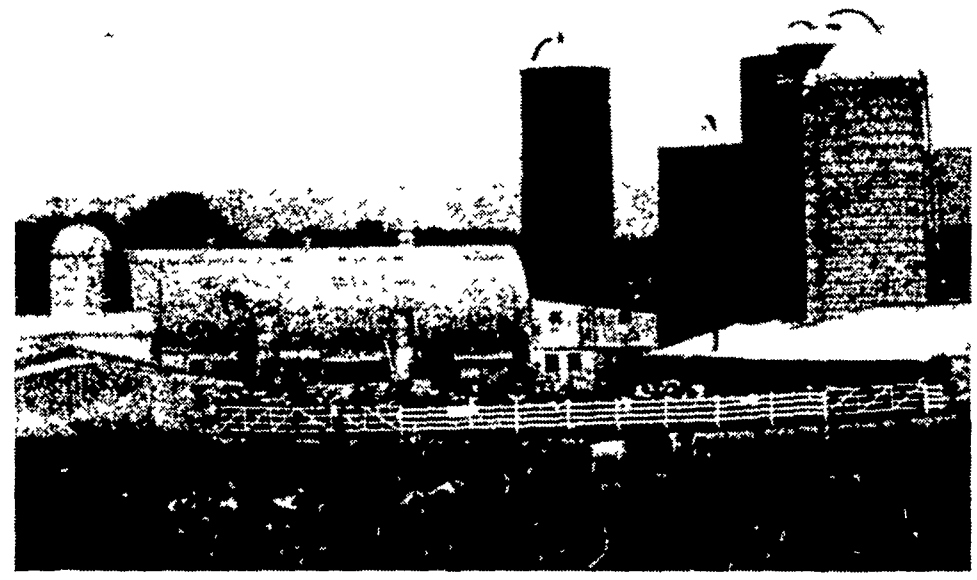
AGRI-KING
KEY TO PROFIT

June is dairy month

WE SALUTE

A SUCCESSFUL BERKS COUNTY DAIRY TEAM

ED, JIM AND DICK YOST



YOST BROTHERS KNOW THAT IT IS IMPORTANT TO HARVEST TOP QUALITY ROUGHAGE AND GET THAT TOP QUALITY FEED TO THE FEED TROUGH. THERE IS NO SUBSTITUTE FOR TOP QUALITY ROUGHAGE. THEY HAVE ALSO DISCOVERED THE IMPORTANCE OF ANALYZING THAT ROUGHAGE AND MAKING A BALANCED RATION FOR THEIR INDIVIDUAL GROUP OF COWS.

THIS IS THE ONLY WAY YOU CAN BE SURE THAT YOU'RE NOT OVER FEEDING OR UNDERFEEDING, THIS IS VERY IMPORTANT.

AS YOU CAN SEE FROM THE TWELVE MONTH ROLLING HERD AVERAGE, THE RESULTS OF A BALANCED RATION MAY NOT BE SEEN IN THE FIRST MONTHS. NUTRITION IS PROBABLY THE HARDEST THING A FARMER HAS TO DEAL WITH, BECAUSE HE WILL NOT ALWAYS SEE THE RESULTS OF WHAT HE DOES TODAY (WHETHER IT IS GOOD OR BAD) UNTIL LATER.

AGRI-KING HAS BEEN PRIVILEGED TO WORK WITH YOST BROTHERS AND MANY OTHER FINE DAIRY MANAGERS WHO ARE SEEING SIMILAR RESULTS.

Egg ads effective, study shows

PARK RIDGE, Ill.-Early research measurements of the American Egg Board national promotion and advertising program have shown a 300 per cent increase in consumer awareness of the "Incredible Edible Egg" slogan and close to a 10 per cent increase in retail egg movement in four major test markets.

Three thousand interviews were conducted last November, before advertising began, and again in March to measure consumer awareness of the "Incredible Edible Egg" slogan and consumer attitudes towards eggs. Awareness of the slogan was found to have tripled from the 13 per cent level to 50 per cent during the first 10 weeks of advertising. Favorable consumer attitudes concerning eggs also increased significantly over the test period.

Retail egg movement was measured in four of the top 20 markets which receive heavy television advertising and in four comparable markets not receiving the boosted advertising. In the four markets receiving the greatest amount of advertising, sales increased almost 10 per cent for the first twelve weeks of 1977 compared to the same period a year ago.

"These results are encouraging, but also very preliminary," stated John P. Wallace, AEB chairman. "The important thing to remember is the long-term nature of changing consumer attitudes and behavior. A continuous, long-range program is necessary to increase the demand for eggs. Producer support has been outstanding in the early stages of the program. A strong advertising and promotion program more essential in a market if we are to our long-range goal confident the indus continue to provi excellent support re keep the AEB pro target."

Father is essential in proper child raising

UNIVERSITY PARK - What happens to the child whose father has little responsibility or involvement with his children? What about the father whose attitude excludes teaching and modeling ethical and socially approved behavior, or the father who fails to establish an active, loving and warm relationship with his children? Greta C. Vairo, Extension home economist with the Pennsylvania State University, offers several examples of what can happen when the father's involvement in the family is weak:

Mother dependency remains too long, and the child is unable to establish mature relations easily.

Identification with a strong father figure becomes difficult. Studies show that concentration camp victims were better able to survive if they had a strong father image to call upon. Individuals with strong father figures almost never commit suicide. Identification with a strong male figure is important for proper emotional and social development.

Children seek stronger paternal figures and often substitue juvenile gangs. Most prostitutes have no strong father images. Many premarital pregnancies occur in girls who have weak ties with their fathers. Alcoholism, drug addiction, and even overeating have been linked to a weak or absent father figure.

Emotional attitudes toward authority are affected.

Boys may become overmale, seeking to prove their maleness by sexual exploitation. Girls may seek male approval through sexual participation.

The father may have been ignored in previous studies on his effect on his children. But he is more important today than ever before, because the dangers in our society are greater than ever before.

Soybean variety released

NEWARK, Del. -- Scientists at the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station and the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Research Service (ARS) recently released a new soybean variety named Celest which they say is high yielding, has excellent seed quality and good seed holding.

According to Dr. H. W. Crittenden, University of Delaware specialist in soybean diseases and breeding, the new variety matures in about the same number of days as the Essex soybean and approximately six days later than James - another soybean variety recently released by the Delaware Experiment Station.

The Celest variety has purple flowers and a dense gray pubescence - or surface covering. In addition, the plants are determinate, have a yellow seed and a gray-colored hilum.

Crittenden, who named the variety for his daughter, says that pods and seeds are resistant to the fungus which causes the gray moldy seed disease. This new variety is also resistant to one of the more common species of root-knot nematodes. Plants have had some tolerance to Mexican bean beetle and good tolerance to drought in light sandy soils.

Celest originated as an F6 selection at the Delaware Agricultural Experiment Station from the cross of Plant Introduction 80837 and Delmar. The cross was made by ARS scientists at Beltsville, Maryland.

Seed supply has been increased in Delaware in 1975 and 1976 and will be distributed through the foundation seed program of the Delaware Crop Improvement Association.

4-H focusing on wildlife conservation

CHICAGO- Youth education, involvement and decision-making are prime elements of a new national 4-H wildlife conservation program sponsored by Atlantic Richfield Foundation through National 4-H Council.

Objectives of the program include utilization of individual and group projects and practices contributing to wildlife conservation; provision of leadership initiative in conservation projects; exploration of career and educational opportunities in this and related fields, and furthering the preservation of natural resources.

Emphasis will be on youth involvement in planning and carrying out innovative wildlife conservation projects at state and local levels. Special grants, totaling $12,000, are being offered to selected states submitting proposals for model wildlife conservation programs in 1977.

In addition, in-depth training in wildlife conservation will be provided at the National 4-H Center, Washington, D.C., Aug. 7-13, for two selected 4-H members from each state. The training will emphasize multiple use concepts of management and land use, public policy and economic aspects of wildlife conservation. To encourage participation, a fund has been established to help defray expenses of the participants. 4-H'ers completing the course will be encouraged to use their new knowledge in assisting with community, county and state wildlife conservation programs.

The new wildlife conservation program funded by Atlantic Richfield Foundation is closely related to ongoing 4-H projects and activities in conservation of natural resources - soil, water, forest, range and grasslands - and recreation, camping and community development.

The Extension Service, U.S. Department of Agriculture, reports more than 175,000 young people are presently enrolled in 4-H wildlife conservation projects. The new program is the first nationally sponsored 4-H effort in this area.

Earth Survival Festival slated

PHILADELPHIA - The first annual Earth Survival Festival will be held here on July 10 from noon to 5 p.m. on Independence Mall.

The Earth Survival Festival will consist of exhibits and displays to educate and inform the public as to the specific problems facing our resources and solutions that are available now. Participants will include:

Governmental agencies - Identification and regulation of energy-resources problems.

Environmental groups - The impact of this crisis on the environment, and steps to balance both needs.

Private industry - Ongoing efforts to cooperate in increased efficiency and decreased pollution.

Commercial concerns - Products which are available now that conserve energy and allow the public to maintain its hard-earned lifestyle.

The primary goal of the Earth Survival Festival is that the many thousands of people who attend will be able to take with them ideas and projects that they as individuals can easily accomplish to do their part in this crisis.

Anyone with ideas which would be applicable to this event is requested to contact the Earth Survival Festival at The Curtis Building, 6th & Walnut Sts., Phildelphia, Pa., 19106. (215) 597-8214.

Hobby farming frowned upon by IR

By JERRY WEBB
University of Delaware

NEWARK, Del. - If you farm for fun, not for profit, you're not a farmer in the eyes of Uncle Sam. The Internal Revenue Service takes a dim view of hobby farmers who try to qualify for the usual farm deductions, according to W. T. McAllister, Extension farm mangement specialist at the University of Delaware.

Despite extensive changes in the tax laws brought about by the Tax Reform Act of 1976, the specialist points out that hobby farming rules were revised very little. The real test of the situation, he says, is whether a farm is operated for profit or for the pleasure of recreation of the owner. If the taxpayer has a profit motive in his farming activites, IRS says he may deduct farming losses from non-farm income. But he must prove his intention to be a profit-producing farmer. The best way to do that is make a proft, according to McAllister.

Past practice indicated that IRS has allowed a taxpayer to deduct farming expenses when a profit is actually made. But if there has been a loss, both hobby farm expenses and receipts are ignored. Some expenses are deductible even for a hobby farm, the specialist points out. Those include casualty losses, interest and real estate taxes.

Quoting the IRS manual, McAllister says Section 183 provides a presumption that a taxpayer is engaged in an activity for profit if gross income exceeds deductions for that activity in two or more of the five consecutive years which end with the taxable year. A two out of seven year rule applies to breeding, training, racing and showing horses.

If the taxpayer meets the two-year requirement, McAllister says, it's up to the IRS to demonstrate that the taxpayer does not have a profit motive for engaging a farming activity.

In making the election to have a period of years show a profit motive, he says the taxpayer consents to an extension of the three-year statute of limitations fo years in the five-year period until two years followin due date of the last year in the period.

Even if the taxpayer does not elect or cannot mee "two out of five year" presumption, the specialist sa can still provide evidence of a true profit motive.

The Internal Revenue Service considers a numb factors in arriving at a decision. Some of these includ the farm expertise of the taxpayer or his advisors, (2 time and effort devoted to the operation and mainten of farm records, (3) whether the activity is conducte businesslike manner, (4) use of a professional manager, (5) size of operation, (6) efforts by the taxp to acquire knowledge related to the activity, (7) expectation that the farm assets will appreciate in v and (8) the taxpayer's history of income or loss farming.

A number of court cases have shown that a taxp needs to have a genuine, but not necessarily reason intention of profiting in a farming activity.

This point is important, particularly for taxpayers little or no farming experience who begin certain operations with the mistaken belief that there reasonable profit opportunity, according to the mangement expert.

Milk per cow at all-time high

WASHINGTON, D.C. - Milk production in the United States keeps on going up, and the main reason is that each individual cow keeps on improving in her output.

Last month, for example, 11.3 billion pounds of milk were produced in the United States, according to figures released by USDA. That was up by 1.7 per cent over the previous year. Moreover, this marked the 21st straight month that production has been above that of a corresponding month a year earlier.

During that period, the number of milk cows on farms has decreased; not sharply, but the trend has continued down. Those on farms during May, for example, totaled 11,978 head, down only six-tenths of one per cent from a year earlier, down only 11,000 head from a month earlier.

Production per cow has been above a year earlier for 21 straight months. Last month, it averaged 1029 pounds per cow. That's the highest for any month, ever. For the record, it topped the former high, set in May 1976, of 1,006 lbs.

Also, for the record, May output in Wisconsin was up two per cent from a year earlier. It was up fractionally from a year ago in California; up two per cent in Minnesota, up four per cent in Pennsylvania; down one per cent from May 1976 in New York. The five accounted for a fraction under 50 per cent of the U.S. total.

Farm labor force up 2 pct.

HARRISBURG - A noticeable shift in the composition of Pennsylvania's farm labor force has taken place this year, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service. The shift was reflected in a survey conducted during the week of April 10-16, 1977.

The Commonwealth's total farm labor force numbered 131,000, an increase of two per cent from the comparable survey weeks in 1976 and 1975.

Family workers increased from 89,000 last year to 103,000 this Spring, an increase of 16 per cent in the family sector. Hired farm workers declined from 40,000 to 28,000, a drop of 30 per cent. Field and livestock workers comprised 18,000 of the hired workers this April.

The average workweek for Pennsylvania farm operators during the survey week was 45.6 hours. Other unpaid family workers averaged 30.0 hours and hired workers averaged 38.1 hours during the survey week.

Family workers in the survey includes farm operators working on farms one hour or more, plus other family members who work 15 hours or more without receiving cash wages during the week. Hired workers include all persons working one hour or more for cash wages during the survey week.

Pennsylvania farm wage rates for all methods of pay converted to an hourly rate, averaged $2.65 per hour during the survey week. That average showed an 18 cent increase from last year's rate of $2.47. Field and livestock workers averaged $2.33, an increase of 12 cents from the previous April.

Nationally, the total number of workers on farms April 10-16 was 4,126,400, a decrease of 107,500 from last April. Of that total, family workers and operators totaled 2,969,100, a decline of 69,100. Hired workers declined from 1,195,700 in 1976 to 1,157,300 in 1977.

The average weekly hours worked by farm operators in the U.S. was 26.6 hours and that of other family members averaged 32.1 hours. Hired workers averaged 36.1 hours or more during the survey week.

U.S. farm wage rates for all methods of pay, converted to an hourly rate, average $2.82 during the survey week. The average was $2.66 an hour a year ago. Hourly workers receiving only cash wages averaged $2.84 per hour compared with $2.64 a year ago. Field and livestock workers averaged $2.62 per hour, up 15 cents from the previous April.

Concern growing over pseudorabies outbreaks

COLLEGE PARK, Md. - A virus-caused disease called pseudorabies is currently causing concern among swine producers and other livestock farmers throughout most of the world. It bears little or no resemblence to rabies and has no known effect on humans.

Although the disease has been around for at least 164 years, it has never caused serious problems - at least in the U.S. - until the last three years. It has already reached epidemic proportions in the Midwest, which is the nation's major pork-producing area.

So far, psuedorabies is not a threat in this area. But Mid-Atlantic area swine producers need to take steps to help insure that the epidemic doesn't migrate east of the Appalachian mountains, notes Dr. Robert C. Hammond, Extension veterinarian and veterinary science department chairman at the University of Maryland, here.

No effective vaccine has yet been developed for pseudorabies, Dr. Hammond reported. And even a time-saving skin test to identify infected animals is still only in the experimental stage.

So the main control measure available to farmers is to isolate feeder pigs and breeding swine brought in from states where outbreaks of the disease have occured. Such pigs should be accompanied by a negative SN (serum-neutralizer) test report for pseudorabies, dated within 30 days of shipment from the originating state. And they should be retested again by a qualified veterinarian near the end of their 30-day isolation period, Dr. Hammond said.

He noted that the Maryland state Department of Agriculture has recently published a list of 24 states which require incoming shipments of breeding swine to be tested for pseudorabies within 30 days prior to shipment. This requirement would apply even to pigs shipped to one of these states from a relatively diseasefree state like Maryland.

So he advises swine breeders to check with their local or state veterinarian before making out-of-state shipments of live animals. The list of states with such restrictions is expected to change weekly.

Finally, Dr. Hammond offers these bits of information on the epidemiology of the disease:

Caused by a herpesvirus, pseudorabies is also referred to as Aujeszky's disease or "mad itch." The latter name is most often applied when it occurs in cattle or sheep, where it produces severe itching and self-mutilation.

The disease is almost always fatal to cattle and sheep of all ages, and these species usually catch it from infected swine. It is 100 per cent fatal to newborn pigs and highly fatal to pigs under six months of age. Older pigs often suffer only light symptoms, and they develop immunity upon recovery.

Unfortunately, sows do not not seem to pass this immunity along to their offspring. Abortion occurs about half the time when sows are infected with pseudorabies during early stages of pregnancy. Those infected in the latter stages of pregnancy often produce mummified fetuses, or weak and stillborn piglets.

Vomiting is a common sympton of the disease in swine of all ages, Dr. Hammond observed. In younger pigs, this is usually accompanied by scours, fever, and trembling, spasms or other nervous disorders.

By contrast, older pigs may become constipated and usually go off feed The sign of illness among pigs is often an u respiratory accompanie coughing.

Dogs, cats and var wild animals are susceptible to the disease they could well play active role in spreadin from one farm to anot The virus appears to transmitted thro contaminated na secretions and saliva. It be inhaled by animals in form of aerosol drop Transmission among pi by nose to nose con Horses are very rarely fected with the disease.

Consumer can help in product development

UNIVERSITY PARK - Looking over new products on the market is part of the fun of shopping. But the bright colorful packages show little of the struggle that takes place before products are ready for the market, say Extension consumer specialists at The Pennsylvania State University.

It takes much work and planning before new products and product improvements happen. Ideas come from many sources. Marketing personnel, researchers or consumers create the idea and help to develop or perfect the product.

After the new ideas are tested against preference and wants or needs of consumers, a business analysis follows. The most promising products survive. There must be evidence that a product has sales potential, that it isn't too costly to produce, and that it's different from existing products. It must also be adaptable to packaging.

Companies conduct home tests and interview consumers before any large amount of money is spent for further development of a product. If a product is successful in a limited test market area, then it's produced for wider or national distribution.

That is where the average consumer plays an important role. After trying a new product, the consumer has a responsibility for letting the company know what was liked or not liked about it. This feedback is a must. It's one way of assuring that the most desirable products will continue to be produced.

Genital abnormalities account for 10 to 20 per cent of the failures of dairy heifers to conceive after four or more breedings, according to experiments at The Pennsylvania State University. The findings of Dr. Tsuneo Y. Tanabe and Dr. John O. Almquist, dairy physiologists at Penn State, are supported by studies among other scientists.

Facts for dairymen

By Alan Bair
Assoc. County Agent
Lancaster, Pa.

"You smell like you've been in a dairy barn," is the greeting I receive occasionally by our office secretaries, and even once in a while from my wife.

The fact is that I find myself in dairy barns almost every day, but only get the "friendly" greeting occasionally. The smell facter is not just the simple fact that I was in a barn but is the lack of a ventilation system.

Keeping your county agent from smelling is not a very valid reason for good barn ventilation, but herd health, milk quality, high production and building deterioration are very good reasons for providing adequate barn ventilation for your dairy animals.

It is well documented . herd health is influenced by barn ventilation. Even though the respiratory complex of problems is the thing that first comes to mind, other problems such as skin irritations, ringworm and pink eye, to name a few, can also be associated with poor ventilation.

Milk quality can suffer greatly when the housing facilities are poorly ventilated. You know from your experience with 'smelly" feeds that the odors that cows breathe can and will show up in the milk. These odors do not have to originate in the feed - the objectionable odors coming from urine, feces and ammonia are every bit as serious in milk. Believe me, it does not take much time under poorly ventilated conditions to get the "barny" flavor in milk.

Almost anyone who has milked cows through the summer knows that ventilation can influence production. I say almost anyone because dairymen are learning that cows housed properly in well-ventilated barns do not experience the summer slump in production.

Production loss due to poor ventilation is by no means limited to the summer. Without realizing it you may be severely limiting production in the cooler months by forcing your cows to breath stale wet air. You suffer, the cows suffer and your bank account suffers. If the barn is objectionable to you for a few minutes, think about the cow that spends her whole day there.

You may not give it much thought, but inadequate ventilation in an animal facility will severely limit the life of the building, as well as the equipment. I know of one improperly designed building in southern Lancaster County that has deteriorated so bad from condensation in just six years that its' expected life is only 10 years! Rusty stanchions, malfunctioning electrical equipment and rotting wood are common in dairy farms due simply to poor ventilation.

When you do finally decide that you and the cows need a better ventilation system, remember that it takes more than just a fan. Think how the system is to work. Getting the air into the barn properly is just as important as getting it out through the fan.

If you need help with a ventilation system, give your extension office a call. We will be happy to give you some help and our secretaries might even complain less about me smelling like a barn!

Mother Nature knows what to do

By LYNN HERSHEY
Delaware Cooperative
Extension Service

NEWARK, Del. - With the exception of mosquitoes, flies, ticks and cockroaches, our family is loony about wildlife. We take Albert Schweitzer's 'reverence for life" philosophy to a ridiculous extreme.

My husband has been known to carry a spider carefully outdoors and place it on a bush. The same husband also buys bird seed in 100-pound sacks, and has spent more on a new feeder than on my Christmas present. (Then he worked for hours painstakingly redesigning the feeder to more exacting bird standards.)

Last Summer I found a grandfatherly praying mantis in the supermarket parking lot, looking in vain for a shrub. I coaxed him into a small paper sack and carried him home to happy release in our rose garden.

Son Dave once built an entire frog palace in the woods. He called it Toad Hall. It had its own pools for splashing, plants for shading, and rocks for sunning, with a never-ending supply of fresh tadpoles brought in daily from a nearby stream. The frogs lived a very good life, and naturally hung around all summer.

Dave also raised Monarch butterflies with great success in one of my jumbo hatboxes. Our whole family skipped meals, homework, and chores to hang over the hatbox, breathlessly watching the miracle of each wet and wrinkled butterfly emerging from its chrysalis.

With nature-loving children in the house, it's difficult to discourage making pets of wildlife. This is the time of when baby rabbits, squirrels and other wildlife offspring are sometimes found by children. Often a youngster can't understand that the kindest thing to do is leave them alone.

Jack Linehan, biologist with the U.S. Department of the Interior, says adopting a wildlife baby is usually a tragic experience and might be the worst thing you could do to the little creature. People assume that a young animal found alone is an orphan. But chances are the mother is nearby, Jack says, and will tend to her young after humans leave the area. Wildlife mothers must often leave their offspring in order to find food.

It's not true, Jack adds, that wildlife parents won't care for their young if the babies carry the scent of humans. However, even brief handling of young wildlife may interrrupt normal parental care and can result in their death. He urges parents to teach children not to touch wildlife babies, and to leave the area quietly and quickly.

If your child does bring a young animal home, Jack advises you to take it back immediately to the same spot where it was found. Don't try to raise it, he urges. Wild pets look cute, cuddly and helpless, but you will face many problems if you try to rear them. In spite of your best efforts, most will sicken and die. If they do survive, they can become very unmanageable as adults, especially during breeding season. Further, after being fed and cared for by humans, pets released into the wild usually die because they have not learned how to fend for themselves.

An appealing baby duckling once captivated our Dave to the point where he brought it home "to protect it from all the snapping turtles in the pond." With great difficulty we persuaded him that it needed its parents a lot more than it needed our protection. So we all took the duckling back and launched him on the pond. You never heard such a commotion! Ma and Pa Duck shot off across the water toward him like small, feathered speedboats, quacking in raucous unison. The baby paddled in their direction as fast as his tiny webbed feet could carry him, emitting a staccato of happy soprano qucks.

Watching the touching reunion, Dave decided for himself that it's best to leave some things to Mother Nature.

Peaches and wheat down

HARRISBURG - Based on conditions May 1, Pennsylvania's 1977 winter wheat crop is still forecast at 7.02 million bushels. This would be a 26 per cent reduction from last year and the smallest crop of record, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Pennsylvania's peach crop is now expected to total 95 million pounds. This is 14 per cent below the 1976 crop.

U.S. winter wheat production, forecast at 1,526 million bushels, is up three per cent from the May 1, 1977 forecast but is three per cent below the 1976 production and eight per cent below the record high 1975 production.

Peach production in the U.S. is forecast at 2.9 billion pounds, down three per cent from last season's total but three per cent above the 1975 crop. Production of clingstone peaches in California is expected to total 1.4 billion pounds, down six per cent from the 1976 total crop and off four per cent from 1975.

Spring potato production is estimated at 22.3 million hundredweight, two per cent below the forecast of a month earlier and ten per cent less than the 24.8 million hundredweight produced in 1976.

Here's help for fruit trees

UNIVERSITY PARK - If you have a small home orchard or just a few fruit trees, a seven-lesson course on how to care for trees to ensure optimum fruit bearing can be valuable. Penn State's correspondence course on home garden fruits gives information on applications of fertilizers, principles or pruning, and selection of methods of harvesting, storing, and packing fruits.

A valuable addition to the course is the Home Gardener's Guide to Fruit Sprays - their selection, application, and safety. The spraying timetable tells when to spray, materials to use, and pests to control for apples, stone fruits, pears and quinces.

The course is available by writing Garden Fruits, Box 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make check for $4.00 payable to Penn State.

Water quality forum set for Berks County

READING - Non-point ces of water pollution, effect on Berks County· ams and possible solutions will be discussed during a COWAMP-208 citizen forum on Wednesday, June 22nd at 7:30 p.m. at the Metropolitan Edison Building, Reading.

Sponsored by the Berks County Planning Commission and the Delaware Valley Regional Planning Commission (DVRPC), the meeting will focus on prevention and remedies for land run-off pollution, according to DVRPC's COWAMP-208 program manger Tom Walton.

Walton noted that citizen recommendations voiced at this meeting will help to shape final alternatives to be presented at the cititzen forums and public hearings in the Fall.

"Among the problems we will be discussing," he said, "are agriculture, residual waste disposal and construction. Some of the alternate solutions we will present for agricultural pollution will include use of grass and legume meadows in rotation with cash crops to reduce erodibility, strict compliance with manure-spreading techniques, and proper use of pesticides."

"Residual waste disposal alternatives might include diversion of surface waters away from landfill sites, enforcement of pretreatment standards for industrial wastes, and requiring extensive soil investigations as a part of on-lot systems."

"Some of the construction alternatives we will be discussing include maintaining a buffer strip of vegetation between the construction site and surface water, grading along contours of the land, avoiding construction on steep slopes and preventing erosion by protecting exposed surfaces with mulch, vegetation, and so on," Walton expalined.

"We will be asking citizens to help us to determine the practicality of these measures and others, based on their knowledge of local conditions." Walton said.

He noted that the June 22 forum will mark the beginning of the final phase of COWAMP-208 in Berks County. The study, funded by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources (DER), is two and a half years old and is scheduled for completion in December.

Citizen recommendations on a final plan to preserve water quality will be presented to DER and the DVRPC following forums and public hearings on alternatives in September and October. The recommended COWAMP - 208 plan will be presented to Governor Shapp and the Berks County municipalities for review and approval in December. When approved, it will become the water pollution mangement plan which the Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources and EPA will use as a blueprint for all future wastewater treatment programs.

For further information on either the June 22 meeting or the COWAMP-208 program in general, contact Tom Walton at DVRPC, 1819 Kennedy Blvd., Phila., Pa. (215) 567-3000, or Scott Keefer, Berks County Planning Commission, (215) 375-6121.

The Resident Pest course is one in a series of nine courses on Pest Control, including Pesticide Usage, Pests of Wood Structures, Stored-Products Pests, etc. Listings of these and other courses in the Entomology and Pest Control offerings are included when you order a course. Need help with your lawn?

UNIVERSITY PARK - The prolonged dry spell in Pennsylvania and the limits on sprinkling caused severe browning of home lawns, making good management vitally important to keep the grass alive. Lack of rainfall also limited the effectiveness of fertilizer because it could not dissolve properly and get to the root system. Insects and diseases have hit weakened lawns.

Penn State offers a correspondence course on home lawns which details maintenance of turf, including rates and methods of seeding, and directions on how to now, water, fertilize, control weeds, and repair established lawns.

To order a copy of the course, send $5.50 to LAWNS, Box 5000, University Park, PA 16802. Make checks payable to Penn State.

Barrel race won by Larriane Alexander

WOODSTOWN, N.J. - Lorriane Alexander of Newton, N.J. made a spectacular race for first in the girl's barrel race at the Cowtown Rodeo, last Saturday night. She finished in 17.44 seconds for $143.08. Judy Clement of Thorofare, N.J. was pushing for a close second at 18.23.

The saddle bronc event was won by John Risoli of Madison, Fla. John also placed second in the bull riding making his total winnings $297.43. Scott Aurand of Lewistown, Pa. won first in the bull riding for a mark of 77 and $237.18.

Jimmie Lee Walker and Stanley Thomas, both of Woodstown, N.J. were tough competitors in riding the bare back broncs. Stanley lost to Jimmie Lee by one point. Jimmi had a mark of 71 for $182.28.

Joe Merola of Penns Grove, N.J. was pushed into second place in the calf roping this week by John Hill of Farmingdale, N.J. John made $248.92 for roping and tieing his calf in 13 seconds flat. Joe made it in 13.9 seconds.

The steers are tough at the rodeo this season. They are heavy and have short necks, and this makes a difficult combination. The time of 7.0 was good enough for top money for Chris Gerhardt of Sicklerville, N.J. $272.44 in seven seconds isn't bad pay.

Over 2,500 people were cheering the 100 contestants on in their race against the clock and the animals to collect their share of the $2,700.00 purse.

CATTLE DRIVE TOKEN RE-ENACTMENT

Stoney Harris held the first annual token re-enactment of his bi-centennial Cattle Drive Saturday.

The cattle dirve took less than an hour with a route from Cowtown through Sahraptown, N.J. and return.

The 20 head of cattle had been worked little since last year's drive, but Stoney and his drovers handled them with the expertise, and manipulation of the old pros.

Later a chuck wagon dinner was served for the drovers, press, and invited guests. The 300 persons also had the option of attending the Cowtown Rodeo.

Family living praised at Berks Society's 25th anniversary

By LAUREL SCHAEFFER
Berks County Reporter

REHRERSBURG, Pa. - There was a very impressive turnout on June 8th, at the Little Swatara Church of the Brethren, when Berks County Group 2 of the Society of Farm Women held their 25th Anniversary.

Many members from other groups in Berks and Lebanon Counties attended to celebrate the special occasion. In all close to 200 women were present.

Highlights of the evening included a presentation of Group 2's history, by Martha Klahr, one of the original members. Mrs. Klahr told how she and other interested women met at the home of Elsie Dunkle on June 10, 1952 to learn about the Society of Farm Women and how they organized their own group, electing Martha Dubble their first president.

Mrs. Klahr also mentioned the groups first projects and fund raising events and spoke of the many happy, funfilled experiences they had. At the present time of which there are 26 members. Mrs. Klahr explained how she made many new friends and of the educational benefits she gained by belonging to the group.

The guests were also entertained by the bell choir of the Little Swatara Church who played several selections with the bells.

The main speaker of the evening was Dr. Richard Canfield, of Keys to Better Living. Canfield explained how the home and marriage are the basic units of our society. The speaker also told the women of the basic needs of everyone and how people communicate in many ways in accordance with these needs.

The first basic need of a person is the need for order in meaning, Canfield started. "Everyone needs order for security in some way," he explained. The second is the need to feel adequate and competent, he continued.

Canfield told the women to make their husbands feel needed and wanted, and that this was one of the major problems in marriages today. Security was another need Canfield discussed. Especially for growing children. The speaker went on to explain how the prayer "Now I Lay Me Down To Sleep" was bad for young children. He pointed out how it arises fear in the child by saying; "If I should die; before I wake," etc.

The need for social approval and belonging is another need Canfield discussed. "Include your children and introduce them to your guests" he said. Make them feel like they belong. People also need to have self esteem, he proceeded, to know that they are worthwhile. Love is another need, there is never too much love, especially for children, the women were told.

The last need Canfield discussed was self improvement and the need for fulfillment. It is the need for growth and maturity, "A person needs to win some of the time" he explained.

In conclusion the speaker discussed the need for stability. "Be consistent," Canfield said, "especially when disciplining your children."

Group 2 also honored the charter members and afterwards served refreshments to the many guests of the evening.

Dr. Richard Canfield, left, chats with Women's Society officers Martha Klahr, Marie Gettel, and Martha Dubble.

Energy program 'disappointing'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. - American Farmers will continue to meet the food needs of the nation with plenty to spare, "provided they do not run out of gas," Robert B. Delano, vice president of the American Farm Bureau Federation (AFBF), said here on Wednesday.

Speaking at a special energy workshop, Delano expressed disappointment in the Administration's energy proposals because they failed to place greater reliance on the market system to increase petroleum production and to allocate scarce supplies.

"By our tremendous production, American farmers and ranchers have decisively proved that the market system is the best stimulus to production and distribution." Delano said, "This is as true for energy as it is for food. Yet, under the Administration's energy proposals, prices of energy supplies would not be allowed to move freely in response to supply and demand."

He added that there is no true decontrol or deregulation of oil and natural gas production in the new energy plan, and there appear to be no new incentives to encourage an increase in energy supplies.

"Taxing available supplies, in whatever manner, does not create new supplies," Delano said. "Government by itself has never created a new drop of oil, a bushel of wheat or a gallon of milk."

Delano also criticized the Administration's attitude toward nuclear energy, which he labeled as "unrealistic and more political than practical."

"While our U.S. atomic energy programs falter because of lack of leadership," Delano said, "other countries of the world are pushing ambitious programs of atomic power."

Condemning "environmental obstructionism," Delano cited the recent New Hampshire case in which a group known as the Clamshell Alliance invaded the site of the Seabrook Nuclear Power Station, shutting down construction.

"We think that the legal procedures covering nuclear power need to be changed to give due weight to environmental considerations without giving endless opportunities for militant minorities to frustrate national policy and majority will," the farm leader said.

Delano also took a swing at the "growing monopoly power of organized labor," saying that the political and economic power of organized labor has grown out of proportion to the number of members now in the labor movement.

"Labor costs now represent more than half of the total food marketing bill and 67.4 per cent of the average food store's total operating costs," Delano said, warning that labor must not be permitted to disrupt and take over the nation's farms or get a stranglehold on the nation's energy production.
